Glendale-Los Angeles Sewer Plan Accepted

[By Associated Press]

LOS ANGELES, May 28.—The Los Angeles city council today instructed the city attorney to draw up a contract with the city of Glendale which would permit the latter to connect with the Los Angeles city outfall sewer system and submit the same within two weeks.

This action came after a delegation of Glendale officials and citizens discussed plans for the connection with the councilmen. The latter expressed a willingness to permit the connection if it could be made without cost to the taxpayers of Los Angeles, and said they would vote for it if the attorney could point the way to safeguarding the city in that respect.

The Glendale sewer plan proposes to construct a 48-inch sewer from the intersection of Brand and San Fernando road to a point on Sixth street, Los Angeles, where it will connect with the outfall of that city. This is to be built entirely by Glendale and presented to Los Angeles in return for that city handling Glendale's sewage. This city will, according to a requirement made by Los Angeles, stand its share of the cost of maintenance of the large sewage treating plant which is located at the beach.

This sewer to be constructed will not be confined to the use of Glendale. It will take care of Eagle Rock, the Atwater district and a portion of the San Fernando valley.

Several months have been spent on this sewer question by the members of the present and former councils of this city. These officials have worked hard and it looks now as though the outcome of these months of toil would be favorable to consummation of Glendale's hopes.

At the meeting today Charles Toll, Mattison B. Jones and Mayor Robinson of Glendale were the speakers for Glendale and they were supported by a company of fifty or more loyal Glendalites.

Charles H. Treat, chairman of the board of public works of Los Angeles, stated that if this contract could be entered into legally by the two cities it should by all means be done. He declared that the construction of the proposed sewer is vital, not only to Glendale, but to Los Angeles as well.

"Things are looking better than ever," said Councilman Horn today. "The Los Angeles officials are meeting us half way, everything is right out in the open. Just as soon as the contract has been agreed upon the proposition will be put up to voters of this city for final action."

Our City comment & discussion by THOMAS D. WATSON

The First Definite Sewer Action Is Soon to be Before the People

IF nothing unforeseen happens, the voters of Glendale will have an opportunity of deciding the sewer problem within a short time.

At this morning's session of the Los Angeles city council the matter was brought up and the Los Angeles city attorney was instructed to draw up a contract with the city of Glendale which would permit the latter to connect up with the Los Angeles city outfall sewer system. This contract is to be submitted to the Los Angeles Council within two weeks.

The next step will be for our own City Council to submit the proposition to the Glendale citizens for approval.

All possible publicity should be given this matter and the people should be informed of its every detail.

The Glendale city officials are to be congratulated on being able to submit the first definite proposal on a sewer we have ever had. We know they have given the matter their conscientious endeavors and we feel confident that their accomplishment will be approved by the citizens of Glendale.

IN the formation of the Order of De Molay in Glendale the boys of our city were given an opportunity of becoming affiliated with a fraternal organization whose aim was to teach love of parents, reverence, patriotism, purity, comradeship and fidelity.

This order started four years ago with a membership of nine and now it comprises 962 Chapters with over eighty thousand members.

The order is a boys' fraternity for the sons of Master Masons and their chums between the ages of 16 and 21. The Glendale chapter started last July with 32 boys and now has a membership of 85. This growth speaks for its need in this city.

Any organization which seeks to train our boys in the higher ideals of life should have the unqualified support of all.

It would be well for fathers to urge their sons to become members for theirs will be the gain.

IN a statement issued today by Federal Prohibition Commissioner Haynes, it is said, in spite of rum running and bootlegging the United States is fast becoming a dry nation.

Figures submitted by him show that major imports of distilled spirits to the nearby liquor smuggling sources altogether amounted to slightly over one per cent of pre-prohibition American liquor withdrawals.

This statement ought to convince the most ardent wet advocate that prohibition is here to stay and they might as well accept the inevitable, and get ready to obey the law of the land.

MONDAY SHOPPING DAY PROVES BIG SUCCESS

GOVERNOR OF NEVADA TO DEDICATE LEGION PLOT AT GRAND VIEW

James Graves Scrugham, Who Served Overseas, to Be Orator at the Services on Memorial Day for County Legion Organizations

Memorial Day in Glendale this year will be a more than usually eventful one because it will witness the dedication of the American Legion Memorial plot at Grand View cemetery as the official burial place of the order in Southern California.

This will bring to our city distinguished guests from all parts of the Southland, one of the most notable being Governor James Graves Scrugham, chief executive of the state of Nevada, who is the first Legionnaire to occupy a governor's mansion in the United States. He will make the chief address of the impressive program at 10:30 a. m. It is probably the first time the governor of an outside state has come to California to make such an address, and Glendale should feel honored to receive such a guest, from Carson City, Nevada.

He is not only an important character on the Pacific Coast but is nationally known as one of the foremost Americans of the present day. He is a past national vice-commander of the American Legion and has served on the national legislative committee of that organization.

Early in the world war he was commissioned a major in the officers' reserve corps, and early in 1918 was promoted to the rank of Lieutenant-Colonel in the United States Army. He served as chief of the carriage section production of artillery divisions and the ordnance department, and was a member of the artillery board of the ordnance department in 1918.

Governor Scrugham was graduated from the University of Kentucky as a mechanical engineer and held responsible positions with the largest engineering firms of Cincinnati, Chicago and San Francisco.

From 1903 to 1914 he was professor of mechanical engineering in the University of Nevada. At the Panama-Pacific International Exposition at San Francisco in 1915 he was commissioner of exhibits for the State of Nevada and chairman of awards on machinery and manufactures at the Panama-California Exposition at San Diego the same year.

In 1917 he was an associate member of the United States Naval Consulting Board; in 1918 he was state engineer of Nevada; in 1919 he was on the public service commission of Nevada; in 1920-21 he served with great distinction as a national commissioner of the American Legion.

He is one of America's foremost contributors to technical magazines and has taken a great interest in all great engineering projects of the nation, especially in the western states.

He is known as an engineer, an orator, a writer. He is a member of Tan Bela Pi, Sigma Chi, Phi Kappa Phi, Masons, American Legion and various other orders.

American Legion officials are planning to make this occasion an event of history. A dozen motion picture news reel cameras will be in Glendale to tell the story and show the world one of the greatest achievements of the American Legion in the west.

A memorial plot capable of holding 10,000 bodies of world war veterans has been secured at Grand View and will be impressively dedicated at the services on Memorial Day. The exercises will mark the beginning of this plot in which the bodies of seventeen heroes of the world war have been laid to rest. As the years pass it will become

GLENDALE TEAM LOSES AT CATALINA

Stormy Trip Makes Easy Victims for Island Outfit

Glendale loses to Catalina team, 7 to 3. Before a large crowd the Glendale outfit was handled in the same manner as the previous teams that played at Catalina Island. The trip on the boat sure knocked the pep out of the Glendale crew as they proved to be very poor sailors and sure set up a wonderful meal ticket to the fishes. It was a very rough trip and members of the boat crew said it was the roughest trip they had made for some time. Besides being half seasick, Alexander, the big brother of "Alexander the Great," made things look worse for us by pitching wonderful ball. Manager Walt says no wonder they win so easy over there.

Anyhow the boys had a wonderful outing and enjoyed everything except the boat ride. The return trip was their only worry. The boys will work hard this week getting in shape for the second round of the Valley League when they travel to Owensmouth next Sunday.

AYARS PARTY RUNS INTO FOREST FIRE

Seeking Boy Scout Camp Site at Arrowhead, They Get Thrill

The eleven business men who left Glendale at 5 a. m. last Saturday for Lake Arrowhead for the purpose of selecting a camp-site for the Summer Vacation Camp of the Boy Scouts of the Verdugo Hills district little dreamed of the exciting day they were to have before returning home. It seems that someone got word that they were coming and planned a little spectacular entertainment in the guise of an honest-to-goodness firstclass forest fire. Well, anyway, here's the story——

Frank C. Ayars, who is chairman of the Boy Scout camping committee thought it time to select a summer campsite for the scouts and accordingly got in touch with the rest of the members on the camping committee consisting of Peter L. Ferry, A. R. Eastman, Roy L. Kent, France Henry, and George Bentley of Glendale; Dr. Frank C. Tillson, Dr. E. H. Wilson and E. B. Thomas of Burbank; Leo L. Lang of Tujunga and Scout Executive Harold Benner.

The trip up to Lake Arrowhead was uneventful with the exception that the party stopped at the Harvey House in San Bernardino and ate breakfast or rather what was the second breakfast for several. Mr. Eastman had a bad headache but it was positively cured before he got back.

At Lake Arrowhead arrangements were made for one of the rangers to accompany the party for the purpose of showing available campsites. Skirting the lake for several miles the party came to a stop, parked their cars and started

EARLY REPORTS FROM MANY MERCHANTS INDICATE THAT THE NEW MOVEMENT IS APPROVED

That the Movement Has Started Is Shown by the Visiting Around That Begins With the Early Hours of the Day

The early hours today showed that Monday shopping was approved by the people of Glendale.

Stores where trade was not expected until 11 o'clock or later, found a pleasant delegation of home folks entering the doors at 9 o'clock.

From that hour until late in the afternoon the visiting around among the stores increased.

Throughout the business center of the city there was a delightful stir of activity and friendly interest, not previously experienced on Mondays.

Where bargains had been advertised, confident merchants had provided extra clerks. Where bargains had not been advertised, preparations had been made for a more or less informal reception and good will making, nothing more.

The element of bargain hunting was not noticeable, in that the patrons of the stores of Glendale indicated they had come to acquaint themselves with goods available and prices for future purchasing. This was highly satisfactory to the merchants, since it will undoubtedly lead to establishing of relations in due time.

The merchants learned this morning there are more new people in Glendale than they had ever met. These merchants have regular partons but many among the visitors were strangers to the business center of the city, who confessed ignorance of the variety of merchandise offered in the city and amazement at the prices listed. From out of town, from the far east, comparison of prices in favor of Glendale, was frequent.

By noon it was indicated to the merchants of the city, who had enlisted in the store to store exposition plus Glendale Daily Press that before night came they would have added to their circle of friends and patrons many whose buying power is undetermined since it has never been exercised in Glendale in a manner particularly noticeable.

It is not expected that the switch from Saturday to Monday as shopping day can be done in one or two weeks. But that a good start has been made was demonstrated beyond all possibility of doubt.

In the Glendale Daily Press of Tuesday the merchants will report the store-view of the passing of the first Monday shopping day.

Alleged Wire Tapper Held for Examination

LOS ANGELES, May 28.—Frank W. Webe, who was arrested in Santa Ana last week on a charge of "wire tapping" was held in the county jail here today while members of the sheriff's force investigated his record.. It was stated that a hearing on the specific charge of attempting to obtain money by false pretense would be deferred until the sheriff's inquiries were completed.

Webe was taken into custody when he tried to collect $150 from the Western Union Telegraph company, which sum had been sent to Santa Ana for Fred V. Webb of Glendale. The circumstances were such that the officers believed Webe got his information about the Webb remittance by tapping the commercial wires and listening in.

JINX DAY TO BE ONE BIG DAY IN REALTORS' LIVES

So Says W. L. Twining of Realty Board, Chairman of Program

Big things will be popping on June 16.

On that day the Glendale Realty Board will hold its first annual jinx—and, according to W. L. Twining, chairman of the jinx day program it will be "some" event.

This jinx proposition has been under discussion in the board for some weeks. One thing after another was suggested, but, heretofore, nothing was decided upon. But Mr. Twining, who was appointed at the last meeting to solve the mystery, has done that "little thing."

This jinx will be held at the old Glendale-Verdugo Park, which is now the Haddock & Nibley park, and will hold forth from 3 in the afternon until midnight.

Promptly at 3 o'clock the bell will ring and the baseball struggle will be on. Those who compose the teams, and the brand of drinks to be passed around between 'rounds," have not yet been decided upon.

Following the game will be a dinner and campfire stunts, dancing, and a mysterious half-hour by the lady members of the organization. Every minute of the time from 3 o'clock until midnight will be taken up completely by hair-raising features. The only thing lacking will be the "fat girl" and the animal show. During the evening there will be special stunts of unusual interest to the younger set.

The jinx will positively be confined to the members of the Glendale Realty board and their families.

A committee consisting of the following prominent members of the board has charge of this event: W. L. Twining, chairman; Mayor Spencer Robinson, President Cameron Thom of the board, Elsa-Jane Realty, Dr. Jessie A. Russell, W. A. Horn, Peter Hanson and Fred Johnson.

This will be one grand get-together affair. Formality will be thrown to the winds and good fellowship will reign supreme. So says Chairman Twining—and you know "Bill!"

CORONER'S JURY FINDS SPENCER GUILTY

The inquest held this morning at 9:30 o'clock over the body of George Hermann by Coroner Frank A. Nance resulted in the verdict of wilful first-degree murder, charging Ted Spencer. Mr. Hermann was shot Thursday morning at his tent in Scholl Canyon. Spencer is believed to have fled to Mexico.

RELIGION AND PATRIOTISM ARE INSEPARABLE, REV. CALDERWOOD TELLS G.A.R.

Memorial Services at Congregational Church Are Well Attended by Glendale Veterans and Women's Relief Corps

SPECIAL MUSICAL PROGRAM WAS GIVEN

Lessons of the Civil War Are Told by the Pastor, Who Points to the Wisdom the Struggle Has Inculcated in the Nation

"We cannot draw a clear line between patriotism and religion. The greater our religion becomes, the more closely it entwines itself around devotion to country. Patriotism has ever been the handmaid of religion.

"Sometimes I think we look for God's revelation in ancient history to the exclusion of His revelation in our own age. God does speak to us through Israel's history, but He speaks to us no less distinctly through the history of the United States.

"We must associate patriotism and religion. They cannot be separated.

"Religion needs patriotism. If it is kept esoteric and cloistered, the world will have nothing to do with it."

—Rev. Calderwood at Memorial services Sunday.

BY GERTRUDE GIBBS

Led by the officer of the day, Comrade Robert Taylor, followed by the color bearer, J. A. Thayer and Commander T. M. Barrett, veterans of N. P. Banks Post, accompanied by wives and daughters who have so loyally ministered to their comfort and happiness—the Women's Relief Corps, of which Mrs. Flora Pixley is president, and from whom Mrs. Mary Bennett, Mrs. Merle Bowen, Mrs. Jennie Tincher and Mrs. Addie Clark were color bearers, to the number of about 90 attended in a body a special service at the Congregational Church Sunday morning under the direction of the post chaplain, C. R. Norton, for which a special musical program was arranged by the choir master, Howard Cavanagh, and a special sermon preached by Rev. C. R. Calderwood.

They were given seats of honor in front facing the pulpit where all could see and hear to advantage. There were few of the old boys whose faltering steps did not need the steadying support of a cane, but they came cheerfully, eagerly, nevertheless. All are of a type that is passing, the pioneers of their day and generation who not only turned the soil of virgin prairies, but broke roads for our national life which have become the highways of freedom.

Their faces show to what purposes they were dedicated, and they also show that "the bravest are the tenderest, the loving are the daring."

The organ prelude with which the service opened at 11 o'clock, "Cantilena" (Stebbins), played by Miss Lilla Litch, organist, was followed by a delicate improvisation of national airs, and the recessional to which the post and corps left the church was a stirring arrangement of "Rally Round the Flag" to march time. Kipling's "Recessional" (Gower) was the anthem sung by the choir directed by Howard Cavanah, and the solo by Mrs. Cavanah was "In Flanders' Fields," with a musical setting composed by Mr. Cavanah.

In beginning his address Pastor C. M. Calderwood assured the post and corps how great an honor and privilege the church esteemed their attendance and the opportunity to receive those who made such great sacrifices in the years that are past. Said he in part:

"The war you fought was no small experiment. We forget perhaps that the Civil war battle line was five times as long as the battle lin France in the world war. One-seventh of our population was engaged in fighting at that time. Imagine what it would mean today if one-seventh of our 110 millions of people were engaged in fighting. The sacrifice was great. One man out of every four who enlisted lost his life. But what was the result? An emancipated population, a reorganized south, a prosperous and united nation. A belief in the liberty and the rights of all nations was fostered by the birth of that new day and we of the younger generation do well to have these occasions to recall the sacrifices you made and the ideals that animated you as you went into that conflict and fought it through; the ideals that have been in your minds as the Grand Army of the Republic since that time. You know what country means because you fought for it.

The theme of the sermon was "The Book of Remembrance" mentioned in the 16th verse of the third chapter of Malachi in which the prophet refers to the book in which were written the names of those who had rendered special service to their king. Said he:

"It is not inappropriate to go back a little further into history and recall to remembrance those who first brought to the shores of this hemisphere those ideals for which you stood, the Pilgrim Fathers and the Puritans who came later, or to those who fought so nobly in the revolutionary war. It is well to recall to our minds the sacrifices of the great war by those who fought and those who stayed at home and to remember those high-minded people who kept the war from the low levels of retailiation and revenge and raised it to the level of high moral aims.

"In the book of remembrance are written also the names of those who in the intervening periods of our history fought no less bravely to bring about much needed reforms. Not all the heroes of our nation have been heroes of wars.

"We cannot draw a clear line between patriotism and religion. The deeper our patriotism the closer it draws to religion and the greater our religion becomes, the more tightly it entwines itself around devotion to our country.

"It was through the channel of a nation's history that God gave to the world the first great revelation of himself. Through the fact and ideal of national unity, Israel learned the unity of God.

"Patriotism has ever been the handmaid of religion, and so we stand this morning on hallowed ground. This is truly a sacred day.

"As I read the prophets of Israel, they found God not so much in his dealings with other nations as in His dealings with them. They did not have to go out of Israel to get a revelation of the Almighty. Sometimes I think we look for God's revelation in ancient history to the exclusion of His revelation in the history of our own age. God does speak to us through Israel's history, but He speaks to us no less distinctly through the history of the United States. The study of the history of the United States can be just as truly a religious exercise as the study of Israel. We can make it so if we will. We do not have to go back to the experiences and the teachers of the kings of Israel for a vision of God. Need we go back when we confront such conflicts as you confronted? Can we not see the hand of God leading this nation in those experiences through which you passed and can we not see the hand of God in some of the experiences we have passed through in later years? If God sent messages to Israel through contemporary events, can He not send messages to us through recent world and national events? I believe He does and that He will if we will but open our eyes and hearts to His revelations.

"We must learn to interpret the voice of God in the social and moral conditions of our own times. We must learn that we cannot defy the laws of God and expect this nation to live. We live only as we obey the laws of God. This has been the history of the world. We cannot give our best to our country unless we have received something from God. As we strive to live a larger religious life we find we must assume those duties commonly called 'patriotic.' We must associate patriotism and religion. They cannot be separated.

"Without religion our national and social fife will soon fall into decline and decay and yet intelligent people are spending all of their energies and time on everything else but religion. The nation's hope is in its ideals and its morals. Its hope is in its religion which furnishes those morals and ideals. Its hope is in God, the seat of our religion and source of our idealism. This is what God told Isaiah. They refused to believe just talking. It did not occur to him and Israel suffered the consequences. They thought Isaiah was just talking. It did not occur to them that this was an eternal message from the Almighty.

"This is the warning God is sending to us. 'Not by might nor by power but by My Spirit, saith the Lord.' Every buried city or empire was buried by some crime in the heart or imperfection of the soul. It has not been so much of a decline of commerce, or decay of art and literature as a decline in character of men and women that has ruined nations. The greatness of a nation is the greatness of its citizens. At the very hour when art and philosophy reached their climax in Athens, and when commerce had whitened the seas with sails from Venice, these capitals were swiftly passing toward ruin because the canker of vice and sin had eaten into the heart of the manhood and womanhood of Athens and Venice. The decline of righteousness is a phophecy of the decline of genius and the eclipse of a nation.

"Democracy is a failure only when religion is left out. National wealth and intellect without religion will wreck a nation more quickly than poverty and ignorance. Patriotism and politics must not be separated from religion. They must rather be shot through with religion, and that is the great lesson for today that the patriotism of today needs it badly.

"But religion needs patriotism. We cannot live religious lives alone. It becomes weakened if it does not find expression in the greater outgoing of life. If religion is kept esoteric and cloistered, the world will have nothing to do with it. When religion begins to live for itself alone, it is already doomed. 'He that saveth his own life shall lose it,' but when religion pours its life blood out in community service and patriotic devotion without thought of self, it is finding its true type.

"When Jesus instituted the Lord's Supper he used an expression which sums up the message for this memorial Sunday. He said: 'This do in remembrance of Me.' The language is so familiar we frequently lose the point of it. Jesus did not say 'in' but a word which in the original means 'over into.' The difference in meaning is striking: 'That ye may be carried over into the constant remembrance of Me'; 'This do that the same kind of self forgetting life may be your daily attainment; this do that My victories may be your victories and that they may become the spirit of your life.' That is why we observe this day and Memorial Day itself; that the spirit of those men who fought so bravely for nation and for God may be carried over into us.

"This day we open the book of national remembrance that the idealism, faith and sacrificial spirit may be born in us again as we live in these days of peace. We remember best when we remember most. We want the same courage and devotion today. We covet the same great inspiration. We would be led by similar great ideals, and we today would display the same great love and devotion in both our patriotism and our religion, and so we open the book of remembrance that this spirit may be carried over into us.

"May the God of our fathers teach our children and their children's children the worth and splendor of the ideals purchased with such weight of blood and sacrifice and consecration. All over our great land may faith in God rise fresh and strong and may the symbol of our unity which your comrades purchased with their blood be always the not unworthy emblem of a deeper unity which leads all our hearts to the home land of the soul.

"May that liberty to free peoples which so recently in the great war was purchased by the world's sacrifice and struggle, become realized in that liberty which is the liberty of the sons of God."

MRS. ROTH OF HOLLYWOOD TESTS HYDRANTS WITH CAR

Mrs. F. V. Roth of Hollywood was driving a machine that went bounding merrily over the curbing at 1273 Boynton street at 3:30 o'clock Saturday afternon. After crossing the curbing it struck the fire hydrant, which was broken off at the joint where it enters the ground.

Detective Sergeant Royle took Mrs. Roth to police headquarters, where she was required to deposit $30, to cover the cost of a new hydrant. The automobile was considerably damaged.

'MAIN STREET' TO OPEN AT THE T. D. & L.

The screen adaptation of Sinclair Lewis' novel, "Main Street," will be shown at the T. D. and L. theatre for three days, beginning Tuesday, according to an announcement of this theatre's management.

The picturization of the novel is declared to have made an unusual picture wherein the characters of the story live vividly. It is said that the producers spared no time or expense in giving the picture the last perfect touches, even going to the extent of studying Main street conditions and peculiarities. Harry Beaumont, who directed the picture, is himself a Main street product, having been born in a small town.

Florence Vidor and Monte Blue play the feature roles, with a strong supporting cast made up of Harry Myers, Noah Beery, Louise Fazenda, Robert Gordon, Josephine Crowell, Gordon Griffiths, Otis Harlan and Alan Hale.

"Main Street" is the story of Carol Kennicott, who comes to Gopher Prairie, a small mid-western town, and instantly sets to changing it to her heart's desire—at least she tries to. She starts with her husband, Doctor Kennicott, whom she considers boorish and crude, because he is practical.

the ascent of a small hill. Everything went well for the first 50 feet the only excetpion being that as you took a stop upward you would slide backward two steps on the slippery needles. At about the 50-foot mark there was considerable evidence of high altitude, boilers low on water and steam pressure going up rapidly. Finally after heroic efforts at footing and crawling through the brush the party reached the top. However, the guide insisted that the campsite he had in mind was only 500 feet down on the other side of the hill so with many comments and heavy sighs the party pushed forward and downward. Not having any measuring instruments no one knew just how far they had descended, whether it was "a quarter of a mile" as France Henry put it, or "just the 500 feet" as the guide insisted, but anyway, a halt was called and after everyone had had his say(it was decided to back trail. At about this point, however, and in order to arouse a little good humor, Mr. Ayars volunteered to give a tree climbing exhibition which would put all prehistoric monkey-men to shame. The only reason he didn't get any further up the tree is that the pitch was so sticky it held him fast.

Arriving back at the cars the men piled in and were soon roaring along to another campsite which proved to be most ideal for the purposes of a Boy Scout summer camp. This was selected and approved by the men as being the best they had seen yet. The campsite consist of approximately three acres in the V of the intersection of Bear and Hook creeks.

After a short stay the men piled into the cars once more and started back towards the lake and Camp Fleming, where they expected to eat dinner. Just prior to reaching Camp Fleming one of the men spotted some smoke over the tops of the trees on one of the ridges, but no one was sure whether it was a forest fire or not. It was then about 1:30 and the men hadn't enjoyed a bite since morning.

Just as all of them started to sit down to the table, the telephone rang and the ranger answered it. With a wild yell of "Forest fire! Come on boys!" he dashed for the door with all the rest of the party close on his heels. They piled into the machines and started off at a mad rate of speed towards the fire. They were soon stopped by a lady who, not content with taking her half of the road, was trying her best to occupy all of it. She was very haughty at the way the men drove, and demanded an explanation from the already overwrought ranger. Obstacle No. 1 passed, the party rushed onward to the end of the road. Here they left their cars and made a very quick ascent of the mountain, being among the first to reach the scene of the fire. The men did not hesitate at the rolling smoke and crackling flames, but started to work immediately with shovels, axe, and picks trying to confine the fire to a small area. They worked hard and fast, many times to the point of exhaustion, but finally the fire was surrounded and there is no doubt but what thousands of acres of valuable timber were saved.

Well, when the party finally did sit down to dinner it was 4:30 and how they dod eat. After dinner they started back to Glendale and arrived about 9:30 p. m., all of the party feeling that they had done a good day's work. The Boy Scouts of the Verdugo Hills district have secured a place for their summer camp, a raging forest fire has been stemmed, and Mr. Eastman's headache has zeen cured.

A girl who had just returned from Egypt was telling her mother about the pyramids and other wonders. Some of the stones, she said, were covered with hieroglyphics. "I hope, dear," said her mother, anxiously, "that you didn't get any of them on you."

K. C. PARTY REVEALS NEW MUSICIANS

Fittenger Family, Recently From Detroit, Introduced

CHILD VIOLINIST

400 Children Are Guests of Organization and Have Merry Time

Happy indeed were the 400 or 500 children who were guests at the party given for the little folks at the Knights of Columbus clubhouse at 330 East Lomita Avenue Saturday, when a dog show and program of entertainment was given. At that time the Fittenger family, all talented musicians, made their initial bow to the Glendale residents. They recently moved to this city from Detroit and have appeared on the professional stage in the east.

At the beginning of the afternoon all the little guests were given toy balloons as favors. The program was arranged by Hugh Bryant and Edward Albright and included vocal numbers by Myra Lee, sixsteen year old pupil of Harry Girard's, who created a sensation when she appeared on a program given recently at a Los Angeles theater. Herman and Norman Title gave a group of vocal duets, including a number of negro melodies.

CORINNE FITTENGER
New Child Violinist in Glendale

Little Miss Katie Girard, eleven-year-old daughter of Harry Girard, gave a very pleasing vocal number entitled "Smiles," and made a very pretty picture in her old fashioned bonnet and hoop-skirt. She has a remarkable voice which has been thoroughly trained. 11-year-old Charlie Woods, Jr., pupil of the Egan school, contributed several recitations, including "My True Love" and "Smile."

About this time Jesse Smith's two-year-old daughter got on the floor and staged an impromptu dance, which "brought down the house." Fancy dance numbers were given by Eileen Walsh and Margaret Tallent. Three members of the Fittenger family gave trio numbers, Earl at the 'cello, Corinne playing the violin and Mrs. Fittenger at the piano. Mary Ellen Fttenger contributed several whistling solos and Geraldine, who is known as the "jazz baby," gave several songs. Corinne Fittenger is one of the best child violinists in the country and has been pronounced by critics in the east as the second Maude Powell. The family has wonderful talent and is indeed a worthy addition to the local colony of artists.

The afternoon program closed with a dog show, after which the children were given a treat of Eskimo pies.

In the evening a "kid party" for grown-ups was given in the clubhouse. All came dressed as children and an evening of fun and dancing was enjoyed by 125 couples. Music for dancing was furnished by a five-piece orchestra.

After a short meeting a little singing was indulged in by some of the members of a social gathering, and half way down the program the name of Bert Brown figured.

When the time came for him to appear a messenger arrived to say that the gentleman was suffering from a bad cold, and therefore the chairman had to expose him to the audience.

"Ladies and gentlemen," he said, "I have to announce that Mr. Brown will be unable to sing as announced, and, therefore, Mr. Green will give us 'A Cong of Thanksgiving.'"

LEON RICE SINGS TONIGHT AT THE M. E. CHURCH

The Methodist Church should be filled to capacity tonight when Leon Rice gives his "Evening of Song" at 8 o'clock. This young artist has appeared with great success in concerts all over the land. The program tonight will run the gamut from negro melodies to grand opera airs, and will delight old and young. Some of the songs to be sung were written for and dedicated to Mr. Rice by composers who appreciated the work being done in their interest by the singer in his various concert tours.

Coming to California about four years ago Mr. Rice organized a concern known as the Mission Film Corporation. Two pictures have already been made by Mr. Rice's concern, one a five reel feature entitled "Wasted Lives," which is now running in the east, and another called "The Ninety and Nine," a screen version of the parable of the lost sheep.

D. W. Pollard, who has been actively engaged in young people's work for many years, will give a short address on "Better Pictures" during the evening.

Jean Rice will preside at the piano and a rare treat is in store for all who are fortunate enough to attend the concert tonight. An offering will be taken.

EARLY PRACTICES OF THE CHURCH ARE DISCUSSED

Gathered at the city hall on Sunday morning, the Men's Brotherhood of the Presbyterian church listened to a discussion of the communism practiced in the early church and also the story of Ananias and Sapphira, by Keith L. Brooks of Eagle Rock. In part he said:

"We read in the fourth chapter of Acts that the Christians of the newly formed church sold their possessions and brought the prices of the things that were sold and laid them down at the apostles' feet, and distribution was made unto every man according as he had need.

"This portion of scripture will certainly not support the modern doctrine of the universal brotherhood of man and the teaching of Bolshevists. This was not the brotherhood of man, but believers. The newly formed church created a situation calling for extraordinary measures. The Jews who accepted Christ were ostracized and deprived of work, so that the Christians had to raise money to provide their needs. This social movement arose out of a spiritual movement. It was the expression of a high spiritual state. A plan of this kind could work only under such conditions. There was nothing of modern communism in all this. There was no abolition of the right of property. A socialist says: "What's yours is mine," but these Christians voluntarily said, "what's mine I'll share with you." There was no compulsion. An American was quoted as having said to Lenine of Russia, "Your whole system is wrong, for it rests on a false system. For communism to have a chance of success you would have to have an exceptionally high standard of culture in the general citizenship and an unusually large supply of able, honest and energetic men, but such an assumption is false." This high spiritual state actually did exist in the early church and their sharing of property was the result of the feeling of unity. Take that away and the brotherhood is gone. However, the plan lasted in Jerusalem but a short time and was not tried elsewhere. When men get the habit of living on alms, it is hard to keep up habits of healthy independence. The time came when Paul had to say, "If a man will not work let him not eat." On the other hand, the passage teaches a lesson much needed by the churches today, that they should care for their own poor.

"The chapter closes with an account of how Barnabas sold every thing he had and gave the money to the Christian assemblage. The next chapter opens with the words, "But a certain man named Ananias * * * kept back part of the price." The action of Ananias and Sapphira is set over against that of Barnabas, who had shown such a wonderful spirit. Ananias was carried away and desired credit for being as noble as Barnabas while privately enjoying what he had made the people believe he had surrendered. His calculations were terribly disappointed.

"The scripture had to tell us that there was a Judas among the twelve, and now we are presented with the painful fact that there was a pair of fakirs in the infant church. The devil had attacked the church from the outside by persecution, but now he goes at it from the inside. To this day his most subtle work is done on the inside. Ananias and Sapphira can do more mischief than all the atheists that ever declared the heavens to be an untenanted space.

"Ananias was something more than a prevaricator. He was not obliged to sell his land. He tried to make out that he was on a high spiritual plane and made a public transaction of it. He professed to lay down his all. He professed cream and practiced skim milk. Any Christian is on dangerous ground when he goes to greater length in his profession than his inner self will stand. Ananias deliberately mocked God and we are told that his wife was privy to it, showing that the offense was not a sudden temptation, but a deliberate and aggravated one.

"To Peter it was revealed by the Spirit that the devil had put this scheme into the heart of Ananias. Men are slow to learn that there is a divine detective system in the world. To God the world is a vast wispering gallery and every secret motive reports itself to Him. Ananias was struck dead because of his hypocrisy. The first funeral in the early church was that of a hypocrite. It seems like severe punishment, but remember that when such miracles occur it is to impart a warning when it is most needed. Ananias' position was a specially awful one. He had been brought in closest contact with the power of God. The Holy Spirit had been recently poured out and vouchsafed to the church during those early days in a manner we know nothing of now, proving His presence by signs, miracles and wonders. It was into such an atmosphere that this spirit of trifling hypocrisy and covetousness came. It was once for all needful for God to impress His actual presence. Deception and falsehood in the name of piety needed to suffer a decisive blow at the outset.

"Though God does not always now inflict instant judgment on such sins of sacrilege, He is none the less displeased. His mind has not changed as to the hatefulness of such sins. Ananias in his broadcloth and Sapphira in her silks still sit in church every Sunday parading their religious spirit but keeping back the real price of discipleship. The chief danger of the church today is not from outside assailants, but inward unfaithfulness, the partial consecration of true believers and the false vows of counterfeits. Let us remember that God wants no gifts for His work that come out of hypocrisy. He wants true consecration and He cannot be fooled."

CHRIST IS CENTER OF THE BIBLE

"Search the Scriptures," was the theme of Rev. Henry O. Kringel of the Concordia Lutheran congregation Sunday morning. He spoke on the two points: that Christ is the center of the Bible; and, that we must read to find Jesus Christ in it. The speaker said:

"In this passage of John 5, 39, namely, 'Search the Scriptures; for in them ye think ye have eternal life and they are they which testify of me,' the Lord is speaking to the religious class among the Jews. These words the Lord did not address to the Sadducees, for they were mere worldings and did not even believe that there was an eternal life. To the Sadducees the Scriptures were what the Bible now is to the world at large—an old book for which men have very little used. These words the Lord addressed to that class of Jews who abided by the religion of their fathers and to whom the Scriptures was a sacred book. He told them: 'Ye have the Scriptures and ye think you have eternal life in them, and in very deed and truth there is eternal life in the Scirptures.' 'But you Pharisees,' the Lord continues, 'have not found eternal life in them. Ye have not searched the Scriptures right. You must search them so as to find me in them; for they testify of me, and finding me you find eternal life.' That is the meaning which the Lord intended to convey to the Jews. It is evident from the connection, for He goes on to say: 'And ye will not come to me that ye might have life,' and again He says: 'For had ye believed Moses, ye would have believed me; for he wrote of me. But if ye believe not his writings, how shall ye believe my words.'

"So the chief and primary object which the Lord here declares is this: that the Scriptures testify of Him. Considering the words in their connection, the Lord tells the Jews: 'The Scriptures testify of me.' We all recall the incident of the Lord speaking to the disciples of Emmaus: 'Beginning at Moses and all the prophets, he expounded unto them in all the Scriptures the things concerning himself.' Of Jesus of Nazareth, Peter declared to the Roman centurion, Cornelius: 'To Him give all the prophets witness, that through His name whosoever believeth in Him shall receive the remission of sins.' Acts 10, 43.) Now our Christian hope stands in none other than in Jesus Christ. But why should I multiply quotations? To John the Divine our ascended Lord appeared, saying: 'I am Alpha and Omega, the beginning and ending.' Being the beginning and the end of all things He is in a very peculiar sense the beginning and the end of the Scriptures. Of Him the whole book treats.

When we ask in a general way, what is this book for? The answer which the Book itself gives is this: the Bible is given to show us the salvation of God. In this book God has laid down and unfolded unto us His plan for the salvation of sinners. Now Jesus Christ is the Savior promised and sent of God. The Bible was never intended to give a complete history of the world. It gives only a certain line of history, the history of Christ from the beginning to the end of the world. The Bible tells how the Savior was promised in Paradise, how the promise was confirmed to the fathers, how He was prefigured in manifold sacrifices, for He came upon earth, what He did and taught, how He suffered and died, how He arose again and ascended to Heaven, and this book ends with the promise that this same Jesus Christ will come again, will wake the dead and will receive His people into His everlasting kingdom of glory.

This book gives the history of Jesus Christ and if we do find some things in it of which we are not able to see how they refer to Jesus Christ we should consider that we live at a late date and things which are dark to us may have been very plain and simple to those who lived when the book was written by the inspired writers. Yet the fact remains: it testifies of Jesus Christ.

"Therefore, grant us to search Thy Word, that our heart may learn ever more freely to say:

"'Other refuge have I none;
Hangs my helpless soul on Thee.'"

"Those poor little boys next door have no mummy or daddy, and no dear Aunt Jane," said a mother to her little son. "Now wouldn't you like to give them something—just a little present?"

"Yes," he replied with alacrity. "Let's give them Aunt Jane."

Clear Lake Catfish

By JOHN BRECK

Fishing, so they tell me, is a right tricky game. Fish are mighty knowin'—they have to be. So do the fishermen. But at Clear Lake it seemed to me the fish deserved the decision. And I'm a fair, unprejudiced witness, too. What I don't know about it would be a compendium of useful information either side of the water line.

My very ignorance entitled me to ask why a rancher and a doughboy should preface their sport by building a roaring fire midway between the two capsized willows which made their snug little cove. "Dunno," was the answer. "But we mostly do it. Figger it kind o' takes their 'tention—draws 'em in, I s'pose." That was not, after all, a vital matter. The real point was a fire felt good in the keen air of the moonlit April night. You could lie on the warm sand and smoke and talk in comfort. Good talk, too. The rancher was a man of parts, a philosopher, and a poet for all he was as natural and unassuming as a fine buck deer. The doughboy was a wit. But as fishermen——

Well, each had about forty feet of cord. One end was pegged to the sand: the other had a couple of bolts tied on for sinkers with a gang of hooks by way of a tail. For choice he lay on his back with his knees crossed and dandled it with his freeswinging toe. Every once in so often he'd coil it in, squint at his hooks, bait 'em, spit on his peg and cast, with a swing plainly acquired by handling a lariat, full length. Then he'd recline and go on talking.

The catch totalled one. We counted it repeatedly. It was tied in a wet grain bag and it did a sack race, all by its lone, between us, pricking each "goal" in turn with its sharp spines. It was a catfish—was it just a sporty youngster gone gallivanting while respectable fishes were asleep in their weedy beds? Or was it the only one? For never a comrade flopped beside him, though our bait continued to vanish, till we, too, turned in.

I woke, next morning, by the embers of the fire. The cove was full of catfish, browsing in the lines of frost which streaked the shallows. A crescent of yellow upper lip showed above the water at each gulp. I shinned up a willow for a clearer view; the half-acre of bottom visible from there was populous as a city, and far up the shore were other herds. They nudged each other about floats of tasty debris like hogs about a trough. A long, lean pike would sometimes scatter them as a hawk scatters sparrows. So would the shadow of a soaring bird. The squeak of an un-oiled wheelbarrow up at the ranch house, sent them to bottom and a shout kept them down for several minutes. But they never flicked a fin when noisy motors roared down the road. How's that for fish sophistication?

The boys were right; summer visitors spoil the fishing—give 'em too much education. They were just making fun of those two cowmen.

TIMBER SHOULD BE REGARDED AS CROP, GOVERNMENT SAYS

Whether timber is to be mined from our forests, without thought of replacement, like coal from our hills, or whether it is to be considered as a crop to be harvested and grown like other farm crops is the main theme of an article in the 1922 Yearbook of the United States department of agriculture, entitled, "Timber: Mine or Crop?"

The article discusses very thoroughly the problems now confronting the country as a result of the lack of a forestry policy and the resulting depletion of the nation's forests by logging operations and fire.

Nearly half the land area of the United States, some 822,000,000 acres, was originally forested, says the article, but the forested area has now been reduced to 138,000,000 acres of virgin forest, 250,000,000 acres of comparatively inferior culled and second growth and 81,000,000 acres of barren land, a total of slightly less than 470,000,000 acres.

"Largely through timber mining," it continues, "the original stand of timber has been reduced from more than 5,200 billion board feet of virgin timber to 1,600 billion feet of virgin timber and 600 billion feed additional in culled and second-growth stands.

"Seventy-five per cent of the remaining virgin timber is west of the Great Plains, and more than 50 per cent of all our remaining saw timber is in the three Pacific coast states, while nearly half of the lumber cut is consumed in the region east of the Mississippi river and north of the Ohio and Potomac rivers.

The article traces the shifting of the timber industry from the east to the middle west and south, and then to the west. The necessity for vigorous reforestation and for the conservation of our remaining forests is emphasized since, according to the article, the available timber supply of the United States is being consumed about four times as fast as it is being replaced.

Copies of the yearbook containing this article may be secured free upon application to the division of publications, United States department of agriculture, Washington, D. C., as long as the supply lasts. Ask for "Timber: Mine or Crop?"

BASEBALL DRAFT PROBLEM IS UP AGAIN

By HENRY L. FARRELL
(United Press Sports Editor)

NEW YORK, May 28 (United Press).—After trying any number of methods to break up the opposition of the leading minor leagues to the draft, the major league club owners probably have found the solution of their problem in the rule prohibiting the transfer of any major league ball player to a league that will not accept the draft.

Discontent has found its way into the American association and the Toledo and Indianapolis clubs, which are in great need of playing strength, may work up enough support before the end of the season to have the draft restored.

The Toledo and Indianapolis clubs formerly had working agreements with the New York Giants and they obtained many valuable players which John McGraw wanted to send out for development. Under the present conditions, McGraw cannot give them a lift, although he has many players that he would rather have being schooled in the association than on the bench of the champions.

The Pacific Coast league is also hearing complaint from several clubs that need help, and it seems probable that a big fight will be staged this winter at the latest.

The Class AA leagues took the stand first that they did not need help from the majors, and while it is probable that they can go along for a while, it is almost certain that they will eventually have to make a few concessions to build up their clubs with young players.

Yale Coach, Who Successfully Discarded English System, and Varsity Crew Captain

For ten years Yale oarsmen had been laboring unsuccessfully under the English system as taught by Guy Nickalls and the Corderry brothers. Ed Leader, who had been very successful in coaching the University of Washington crews, went to New Haven this year. He dropped the English methods entirely and in Yale's first race of the season the Blue shell finished ahead of Columbia and Pennsylvania in the 'varsity. Above is the first photograph of Leader since he has been Yale's coach. The insert shows Bernard B. Pelly, of Seattle, Wash., Yale captain.

ESSENTIALS OF A SATISFACTORY LOAN

President Henry M. Robinson of Pacific-Southwest Addresses Bankers

If a banking institution lived strictly up to its rules or formula in making loans it would lose a very considerable percentage of its customers and its depositors, was the statement made by Henry M. Robinson, president of the First National Bank of Los Angeles, the Pacific-Southwest Trust & Savings bank, and the First Securities company, in his address Saturday before the California Bankers association in Long Beach. His subject was, "Essential Requirements of a Satisfactory Loan."

After citing various formulas used by banks in determining a proper loan, Mr. Robinson quoted the following conclusions as being the chief elements in a satisfactory bank loan:

"That the application be considered only if the customer's relation to the bank entitled him to such consideration.

"That he has established a proper banking relation.

"That his character is such as to entitle him to the loan, if other conditions are met.

"That he is engaged in a worthy productive enterprise.

"That the loan is protected by collateral or by a statement that assures repayment.

"That maturity can be agreed upon, and that except for some untoward happening, payment will be made at maturity, and lastly,

"That the plan for repayment is reasonably sure of consumation."

"It is to be recognized," Mr. Robinson said, "that in the agricultural communities, needs must be met on a modification of these formulas, but on the whole they form a basis on which the stability and integrity of the institution, the liquidity of its assets, and the standing of the customer can be based, with the best results for both."

"In the last few years, especially in the south, the marked increase in industrial and commercial operatons, superimposed on the seasonal requirements of the agricultural producer, has put an ever-increasing burden on the commercial banks and commercial departments of state banks," Mr. Robinson stated.

"If the the tendency is to continue at any such rate as in the last few years, the problem will become acute, he continued.

"In the last few years the tendency on the part of those operating commercial banks and the tendency of governmental officials having to do with such banks has been to require greater liquidity rf loans and a disposition to avoid as far as possible long time loans of indefinite maturity, which soon come to be considered frozen and subject to criticism.

"Since the Federal Reserve system has been functioning, better understanding of what constitutes liquid paper has become general.

"One of the definite results of greater pressure on commercial banks has been to bring home to the banker, and the customer as well, the fact that the customer has some duties in the premises, in addition to the mere payment of the interest on a well secured loan. For a great many years the customer was likely to believe that, if the loan was well secured and the interest paid promptly, the bank had no right to ask anything more of him. Of late years both parties to the transaction have come to recognize that the customer's position and relation to his bank must carry other considerations than merely the prompt payment of interest and the adequate protection of the loan."

WAY TO SUCCESS IS DESCRIBED BY REV. DR. FUNK

Taking as his text: "Neither shall the cruise of oil fail." I Kings, 17:14, Dr. Funk spoke as follows at the First Lutheran Church:

"Eighty per cent of the men who are 65 years of age are either partial or entire paupers. These men were not able to lay by something for old age. They are dependent on charity, relatives or friends. The sea of life is strewn with human wrecks. Who is there among you that can say, 'I have never failed?' There are many who start out in life with fair promises and lofty ideals; but, alas! they do not persevere until success has been attained.

"Indeed, men may have power and wealth; they may be cultured and refined, and yet fail most miserably. And men fail, first, because they have never learned of Him Who never failed, Who gave promise to the widow of Zarephath, 'Neither shall the cruise of oil fail.' In short, they do not love, trust and obey God, as the widow did.

"Secondly, they fail because they do not observe the Command to love your neighbor as yourself. They have assumed the wrong attitude toward their neighbor. They curse and damn the world, and look upon other men as enemies. Such men should pray, 'Renew a right spirit within me.' Confidence in others and a spirit of toleration, will add greatly to our opportunities for success. Let a man assure others that he trusts and obeys God; that he is sure that no permanent harm can come to him, and that his cruise of oil shall not fail; and he will be surprised to find that his confidence begets confidence in others, and that his little world has been transformed by the spirit of the One who never failed."

Reverend Edmonds Has An Interesting Topic for Sunday Sermon

"Silence in Heaven" was the sermon subject of Rev. W. E. Edmonds at the Glendale Presbyterian church yesterday morning. The sermon was based on the passage in Rev. 8:1-5 and was in part as follows:

"God rules in heaven and all beings there are subject to His holy and righteous will. Every harp is silent. Not a hallelujah is heard. The thunders of celestial choirs are hushed. Not a sound invades the stillness. No speech is so eloquent as silence. No measure in all the harmonies of the universe is so impressive as the emphatic pause. Of all the beautiful pictures of heaven none is so strangely thrilling as this hush of silence for half an hour. The Lord is in His holy temple, let all the earth keep silence before Him. The temple of our purest thoughts is silence.

"If we would learn enduring strength we must dwell much in the depths of silence. Many live too much in the glare of excitement. This heavenly silence may have been like the calm before the storm. Silence and calmness are no guarantee that all is safe and right. It may be only a pause of the forces of providence before conflict and crisis burst upon us. During the silence 'tis well to have anchor ready and soul prepared for the last terrifice test. This half hour of silence marks the close of one period of prophetic fulfillment and the beginning of another. The next great change is about to be ushered in. Heaven waits in silence. Do we realize that we are standing upon the edge of time? Let us stop in the heated rush of life and pray.

"It would seem as if God called for silence in heaven because the most important service on earth or heaven was about to begin. Up from the earth ascends the incense of intercession. God bends His ear to listen to the faintest whisper of His peoples' prayer. It takes precedence to the songs of the angels. First silence, then prayer. God's priceless treasures are the prayers of believing loving hearts. God desires to link every chapter and phase of human history with the name of Jesus and send it by way of the throne of grace.

"The believing world today waits for the trumpet call. Our prayer is, Hasten, O Lord, the coming of the day when the trumpet shall sound calling the General Assembly of the first-born. The trumpet is a signal to advance to certain victory. It calls either to life or death and the answer is for each man to make for himself."

SHRINE CLUB TO AID IN HONORING HONOLULU CHIEF

Members of the Glendale Shrine club are to actively participate in the honors paid to the Imperial potentate of Honolulu, "Sunny Jim McCandless," in connection with the ceremonies of Al Malaikah which is to be held in the horse show pavilion at the Ambassador hotel tonight.

The club will furnish a guard of honor composed of four officers, as an escort. The club has also been requested to attend the ceremonial as a representative body of Glendale Shriners. To that end President D. Ripley Jackson is asking all nobles who desire to attend to assemble at the Masonic temple at 6:30 Monday evening.

The next regular meeting of the club will be held June 6 in the new club rooms at 221-A, West Broadway. It is expected they will be comfortably equipped with furniture by that time.

June 26 the club will enjoy a moonlight dance on the tennis court of Noble W. S. Rattray, 286 Kenneth road, who has generously turned over to the club for the evening, his spacious grounds.

CO-OPERATIVE FARM MARKETING NOTES

Department of Agriculture Plans to Study Scientific Distribution Equally With Production.

More attention must be given in the future to the economics of agriculture and to better marketing methods, without lessening efforts to promote efficient production, it is declared by Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, in a contribution to the Banker-Farmer, the bulletin of the American Bankers Association Agricultural Commission. Under the direction of D. H. Otis, the commission is giving particular attention to co-operative farm marketing.

"When land was advancing rapidly in value the farmer could afford to take some of his profit in the increased value of his land," says Secretary Wallace. "We are past the period of advancing land values, and, if agriculture is to be maintained, it must be on a basis which will yield a fair profit one year with another. So I have been studying the department with a view to strengthening our economic work."

"We have gotten into the habit of looking upon agricultural production as a sacred obligation, and so it is in one sense, but it is no more sacred or binding than the obligation to market crops without waste. If we do not do that we might as well not produce them," says Mr. Wallace.

• • •

He adds: "It is the purpose of the Bureau of Agricultural Economics to inquire into everything which affects marketing and price, with the thought that we must serve the agriculture of the nation as thoroughly on the economic side as we have served it in the past on the productive side. As to working our way out of the depression, the first responsibility rests upon the individual farmer. If he is to get help he must help himself, both as an individual and by joining with other individuals in co-operative efforts. The Government is under obligation to clear away any obstacles which do not give to the farmers, individually and collectively, a fair chance to help themselves. The farmer is entitled to exactly the same rights and the same opportunities that are enjoyed by other citizens. He is entitled to a square deal."

• • •

"It is not the obligation of the Government to give the farmer any privileges not given to others," Mr Wallace continues. "If I understand the minds of the farmers of the United States, they are not asking for special privileges. All they are asking is that they may be assured of equal opportunities, of open and competitive markets, and the right to organize and market their products collectively, and to have the same access to the nation's money pool as other people have. Farmers can meet together, pass resolutions, make speeches, and go home feeling better for a time; but this sort of thing alone will not get them very far. The time has come when the farmers must themselves organize agriculture in a thoroughly businesslike way; adjust their production to the needs of consumption; stabilize their products and market them efficiently; study conditions agriculturally and industrially which influence the demand for and consumption of their crops; get a better understanding of the administration of the credit machinery; and employ trained men to do for them what they can not do for themselves."

• • •

That is to say, in substance, that agriculture must be put on a par in efficiency of method with other Big Business.

• • •

It has been pointed out by the United States Department of Agriculture that insufficient business and poor management are the outstanding reasons for the failure of many farmers' co-operative associations. Lack of capital, liberal extension of credit and dishonest management are the minor causes for the failure of 243 farmers' buying and selling associations since 1913. At the same time it was learned that out of 70 co-operative creameries, their average length of existence was a little over seven and one-half years.

• • •

The State Bank Division of the American Bankers Association is now compiling facts of successful co-operatives of all kinds and in all parts of the country, with the idea of building up a body of sound method and experience to serve as a trustworthy guide in the further development of the co-operative farm marketing movement.

FAMOUS MRS. FAIR AT THE GLENDALE IS THRILLING

Although Fred Niblo's picturization of the great American play, "The Famous Mrs. Fair," at the Glendale Theatre, deals with the lives of persons moving in the highest social circles, this Metro-Louis B. Mayer production has more than enough thrills and good, fast action to keep it from being confused with the ordinary tea party plot.

Blending into the main theme of James Forbes' famous stage creation and affording exciting contrast to the quietly tense developments of the story are a number of big melodramatic scenes which will bring a thrill to the more blase of theatregoers.

Probably the most spectacular event in the Fred Niblo production is a race in the dead of night between a through passenger train and high-powered roadster. Cullen Landis, at the wheel, took several chances in getting realism for the screen. Roaring along at breakneck speed on the state highway that parallels the railroad tracks in Santa Barbara county, dodging cars along the route, making sharp turns on mountain roads, scaling steep grades, Mr. Landis gave the cameraman something to talk about.

Flirting again with fate in his roadster, Mr. Landis, in another episode of the picture, skids his car on a wet pavement at a forty-mile gait, making a sharp hairpin turn in his pursuit of the despicable Dudley Gillette. His overtaking the villain precipitates a fight that for bitterness and realism is rivalled only by the famous battle in "The Spoilers." Fortunately, the production scheduled allowed both players a week's rest after the affair.

Captain Examines Smoke Detector.

New York, The measures of precaution taken to insure the safety of steamships, especially those in passenger service, are so elaborate nowa-days that it is generally deemed a greater risk to cross a busy thoroughfare in a large city, with its scurrying cabs and automobiles, than it is to take an ocean journey. The devices utilized aboard the steamships of the United States Lines constantly prove of great interest to the thousands of persons who travel the Atlantic on these modern vessels, and their captains are constantly beseiged by passengers of both sexes, young and old, with queries concerning their operation.

Captains take a great pride, naturally, in pointing out the features about their craft which are of interest to their passengers and find that, next to the subject of food, its preparation and service, voyagers are most desirous of knowing upon what mechanical devices the safe passage of the liner depends.

Captain Theodore Van Beek, commander of the United States liner President Roosevelt, has found that a fire indicator and what is known as a smoke detector, both located on the bridge of the vessel, are features of the steamship's protection service which his passengers particularly desire to have explained to them. Both these devices are unique and of an immense value from a precautionary viewpoint.

The smoke detector, devised to reveal to the men on duty on the bridge the presence of smoke from any conflagration, big or small in any of the cargo holds, is built into the liner as is the fire indicator.

A series of tubes run from each hold into the glass faced cabinet in the pilot house on the bridge of the President Roosevelt. Through each of these tubes, the cabinet end of which is stamped with the hold number, air is steadily sucked up by means of an electric suction pump.

The slightest amount of smoke in any hold of the vessel is drawn up through the pipes in that section and can plainly be seen as it arises from the end of the tube in the cabinet. An indication of how efficient is this detector is shown by the fact that, when testing it at the end of each trip, a cigaret is smoked near one of the hold vents, and the smoke is rapidly sucked up into the pilot house cabinet and immediately noticed.

In order that the men on duty in the pilot house may be particularly vigilant in watching the detector for evidence of fire, there is a standing reward of $25 to the man who first sees smoke coming from any of the tubes. It can readily be appreciated that this smoke detector would make the location and extinguishing of any blaze a matter of but a few minutes, as the President Roosevelt and the other vessels of the line are equipped with the last word in fire-fighting apparatus.

Equally as important as the smoke detector, which naturally can only show where there is a fire of a smoky character, is the fire indicator, which is operated by heat and leads to the discovery in any compartment of the vessel, be it dining salon, social hall, gangway, or pilot house itself, of a blaze.

The registering device of this indicator, located in the chart room of the liner, has five drops, similar to those used in regular electric call annunciators. These drops represent five different sections of the ship, each indicated by a number on a chart near the apparatus. Electric wires lead to these sections and connect with what appear to be ornaments in the ceiling. Any heat reaching these "ornaments" causes a drop to fall on the indicator, and rings a gong. A man dispatched to the section shown on the indicator can then immediately tell from another device of a similar nature the exact part of the section where the blaze would be.

This fire indicator is also particularly sensitive, so much so, in fact, that a burning match held near one of the registering points will cause the main drop in the chart room to fall, and further register the point at which the heat is generated.

Recently when a photograph was taken aboard the President Roosevelt, the heat from the flash light, though but temporary, was sufficient to cause the fire device to signal, causing men on the bridge to rush to the chart room, in answer to the warning gong and then to the pilot house, where the photographer was just starting to put away his apparatus.

Have You Eaten Your Covered Wagon Yet?

Being hungry enough to eat nails isn't being hungry at all. Times have changed. Unless one is hungry enough to eat a covered wagon, he has not experienced the truth of the saying, "the pangs of hunger drove him on."

It happens that the covered wagon promises something much more amendable to the disgestive organs than nails, however, for it is the newest and latest creation in ice creams, originated by the confection artists at the Dennis soda fountain, Roberts & Echols pharmacy.

This dainty means of transportation shows a vanilla wagon top resting on banana wheels, baked animal teams, composed of such a combination as the lion and the lamb, the fox and the rabbit, and other friendly combinations in lieu of horse power, the wagon tongue being a tapering tooth pick and the whole skidding recklessly over a surface of snow and shrubs (the snow and shrubs being composed, respectively, of marshmallow and nuts). The top of the wagon is banked with snowy whipped cream.

As a complimentary introduction of the covered wagon as an item on the menu, Mr. Dennis invited the employes of the Security Trust and Savings bank to be his guests and consume the new delicacy. The guests were received at 4 o'clock Friday, and unanimously voted that the covered wagon would take a long trip of popularity, if their judgment rated for anything.

Sometimes when washing blouses one's hands become quite shriveled and feel most uncomfortable. If a little salt or vinegar is rubbed well into the skin it will remove unpleasant feeling and leave the hands beautifully soft.

KIWANIS CLUB IS ENTERTAINED BY REALTORS

Demonstrate They Can Make Good in Many Ways

BY W. L. TAYLOR

The real estate men demonstrated that they can make good in more ways than one at the Kiwanis club luncheon Friday given at the Tuesday Afternoon club house, at the corner of Lexington and Central, when under the leadership of E. P. Hayward they acted as entertainers to the largest number of members present in several weeks.

The opening number of the realtors was a quartet composed of E. P. Hayward, Wm. Horn, Harry McBain and George J. Lyons. As an introductory number, "Kiwanis" was sung, and the applause was so urgent that the quartet responded with several other numbers.

Dr. Jack Anderson gave a ringing talk on "Helping the Under-Privileged Boy," and stated that the Kiwanis club should get behind a movement to put at least one deserving boy on his feet.

"There is no greater work to be done," said Dr. Anderson, "than the placing of a deserving lad in a position where he will have an opportunity to make good, and I am sure this club will agree with me and take up the work in a systematic manner. We do not need to give so much money, but there are other ways in which we can help the boys."

President A. L. Ferguson stated that a suggestion had been made that the Kiwanis club entertain the boy graduates of the high school at a regular meeting of the club in the near future. The suggestion met with the hearty approval of the club and the boys have a good dinner coming soon.

Four new members were added to the club's growing list in the persons of Rev. Clifford Cole, C. C. Sherrod, Len C. Davis and D. L. Gregg.

Secretary Pilling of the Glendale Credit association introduced several visitors, who were to take part in the opening of the Industrial Exposition.

President A. L. Ferguson gave a splendid account of his trip to the principal's convention at Yosemite, and stated that the Rotary and Lions clubs were holding meetings at that resort and that he found them a great bunch of boosters.

The Kiwanis club of Pasadena is to stage a big picnic at Brookside park Wednesday, December 30—Decoration day, and an urgent invitation was extended Glendale Kiwanians to attend.

Bill Bode reported that the dinner and dance would come off as scheduled at the Sunset Canyon Country club Friday night next, and that a great time is expected. Only 110 people can be accomodated, and those desiring to go should get in touch with Bill Bode at once.

Mr. Roth, the memory expert was on hand, and gave a wonderful demonstration of what he can do with his trained memory. Passing down the tables he secured the name of each one present, and returning to his seat at the head of the table he called each man by name. He also put on a test in figures which was more difficult. Taking figures from one to 18, some one called for certain numbers to be placed in front of each number. When the 15 spaces had been filled, Mr. Roth started with number one, and without looking at the blackboard, called each number as indicated, only once hesitating in the list.

Bert Perry donated five pounds of Chase & Sanborn coffee, which was given as special prizes to C. C. Sherrod, Dr. Luccok, George T. Smith, Herman Nelson and Ben Towman, who drew the lucky numbers from a hat. Goode and Bellew gave the price of cleaning a suit and H. M. Parker was the winner.

Charley Stuart, the popular druggist, gave a silent boost in the form of miniature jars of face cream lotion, which was one of the best boosts ever given. Percy Hazelton reminded the members that South Brand boulevard dirt is worth something these days by leaving a small box of the soil at the plate of each member and vistior present.

FIRE DEPARTMENT STARTS CLEANUP CAMPAIGN

Mass Meeting Will Be Called During Week to Explain the Plans

EAGLE ROCK, May 28.—Captain Ernest Rhoads of the Los Angeles fire department bureau of Fire Prevention and Public Safety was scheduled to speak before the students of the Eagle Rock schools today to enlist their aid in the fire-prevention campaign to be carried on in Eagle Rock, beginning next Saturday.

With the assistance of the older boys under the direction of Boy Scout leaders, and men detailed from the Los Angeles department, the Fire Prevention bureau will rid every vacant piece of property in the limits of Eagle Rock of growths of dry grass and weeds which endanger structures and entail extra work for the local fire fighters during the summer months.

An intensive campaign will be carried on here throughout the week, with a mass meeting at Central school on Thursday. Members of all Eagle Rock organizations, the Improvement club, the chamber of commerce, realty board, Boy Scout troop, American Legion, and every other association or resident who is interested in this move which will vitally benefit Eagle Rock, is asked to be present. Captain Rhoads will speak again at this meeting.

For the boy, he has a detailed plan for clearing the lots. He will tell them the proper procedure to follow in building a fire-break, what a fire-break is, and the most effective method of fire-fighting. The campaign will be made an educational feature.

This morning heads of the civic organizations in Eagle Rock met with Lieutenant Weldey of the local department and Capt. Rhoads at the city hall for a brief conference as to the plans which will be carried on here during "Educational Week," when residents and the school children will be instructed as to the proper course to pursue in completing the "clean-up" next week. Full announcement of the course of action which the fire department decides upon will be given later.

FIRE HOSE WASHED AND RETURNED

EAGLE ROCK, May 28.—The 1200 feet of fire hose which Eagle Rock residents were alarmed to see departing for Los Angeles headquarters as soon a sthe new fire fighters arrived in Eagle Rock, has been returned to Eagle Rock cleaned, dried and properly numbered. The hose was in unsatisfactory condition from previous fire calls after which it had not been allowed to dry properly, so the first action of the Los Angeles men was to see that it was put in satisfactory shape to prevent its complete loss through neglect. The ladder in use here was condemned as dangerous after several tests in which it proved unsteady and risky. A new extension, suitable for the work here is being substituted. More hose was added to that in use here, so there is now about 2000 feet in this department.

This corrects the erroneous impression—that Los Angeles deprived the local department of its best equipment.

NEWS OF EAGLE ROCK CITY

JOHN M'GROARTY SPEAKS HERE JUNE 14

Popular Writer, Speaker to Appear on Twentieth Century Club Program

John Steven McGroarty, who brought the Mission Play to California, will be the speaker of the afternoon at the Twentieth Century club meeting on June 14. Mr. McGroarty, whose "Poor Blundering Page" in the Los Angeles Times magazine section has made him one of the most prominent press writers of today is immensely popular as a speaker, as well as an individual. He is engaged in speaking throughout the country most of the time, and on several other occasions an attempt has been made to secure his appearance here, but previous engagements have prevented since he spoke at the Sunrise Easter service at Eagle Rock a year ago.

Mr. McGroarty will be a big drawing card for the afternoon program. His work is read by thousands of people in Southern California, who take a personal interest in his adventures in the "Roaring Towns," and also in his little grey home in the "Green Verdugo Hills" where he holds a life membership with many others in the "Millionairs club of Happiness and Contentment."

Elles Rhodes, popular vocalist, will sing several solo numbers. The luncheon speaker has not been announced yet.

Mrs. Alice Winters is in charge of the program, and Mrs. Mary Fiske will be chairman of the day. Everyone is urged to draw a circle around this date, June 14, and arrange to attend both the luncheon and afternoon programs.

REALTY BOARD IS TOLD VALUE OF L. A. HARBOR

Mr. Wheaton Presents Vital Importance of Issue in Election, June 5

EAGLE ROCK, May 28.—The Realty Board met in the City Hall Friday night for a short address by W. S. Wheaton of Los Angeles, on the Harbor Bonds. He presented in detail the value of the Los Angeles Harbor. He gave the following statistics in showing the enormity of business handled at the harbor, all of which is having its effect upon the growth of Los Angeles along industrial lines:

"Los Angeles Harbor is second to New York Harbor only in the volume of business which is handled. There are 3500 stevedores kept at work daily on an average wage of 80 cents an hour. The harbor is worth $75,000,000 per annum to the industries. Eleven ships, from eleven foreign nations enter the harbor in one day. This foreign trade necessitates keeping salesmen in foreign markets who at all times are in touch with the trade questions of the world. Eight large industries are eyeing Los Angeles as a future home because of the immense advantages here for shipping abroad."

Mr. Wheaton went on to detail the industries which will locate in Los Angeles if the Harbor Bonds go through on June 5.

Many other graphic phases of the harbor question were discussed by Mr. Wheaton in his brief talk before the meeting adjourned to allow the Chamber of Commerce opportunity to hold its election meeting.

LOCAL MAN WINS SECRETARYSHIP OF C. OF C.

Donnell G. Montgomery Noses Out Other Candidates for Position

Donnell G. Montgomery, 260 North Acacia avenue, successfully weathered the interview with the chamber of commerce directors and was appointed paid secretary for Eagle Rock. Mr. Montgomery appeared before the board with splendid recommendations from Mr. McNeil, of the law firm with which Mr. Montgomery is at present associated, and from Councilman Sanborn of Los Angeles, Mayor Cryer, John Randolp Haines, Richard P. Dobson, and many of the executives in the Los Angeles board of public works.

Mr. Montgomery has resided in Eagle Rock for about eight years and is one of the ex-service boys whose names appear on the plate at the public library. Twenty precincts in Los Angeles were under Mr. Montgomery's successful supervision during the state Anti-Saloon league campaign. He attended Occidental college for one year and a half, and later took an intensive course in political science, studying for a city managership position, at Stanford. He has recently been a student in the law school of U. S. C., and an employe of a prominent Los Angeles law firm during his spare time from school work.

Mr. Montgomery has many friends in the administration department of Los Angeles city and county, and this was one of the deciding factors in winning the position for him here. Although his academic training is exceptional, this is the first large executive position Mr. Montgomery has held and he is more than earnest in his desire to gain for Eagle Rock the things which are vitally needed, insofar as his position with the chamber of commerce gives him an opportunity to aid in the work.

In speaking of the purpose of the chamber of commerce and of the duties of a secretary, Mr Montgomery said, "A chamber of commerce should be the true voice of all the people in this section, or in any section. I will study what makes a 'homeland' here, and go after those things.

"The chamber of commerce should work for the good of the community as a whole, not for an individual or for any one group."

H. L. Pittenger, the other candidate who was requested to appear before the board for an interview, withdrew from the race late Friday afternoon. All other candidates had been voted upon by the interviewing committee and eliminated in favor of Mr. Montgomery and Mr. Pittenger. Four candidates put in their applications for the position previous to the meeting Friday night, and a surprise candidate, R. E. Brown, of Santa Monica, appeared to apply for the position at that time. Mr. Brown has been a construction engineer for 20 years and has a large circle of acquaintances in Los Angeles official departments. But Mr. Montgomery was successful in securing the position over the other candidates.

During the meeting of the directors, a resolution was passed to the effect that Mr. Maynard be referred to the Los Angeles city planning commission to fill the vacancy on that board. He is in a position here where all matters taken up by that group in this section will be under his thumb for advisement.

Mr. Marsolf, city clerk, informed the directors that the chamber of commerce would, in all probability, be allowed to continue using the city hall for public meetings, and could also take desk space therein if a strong resolution should be presented to the proper officials in Los Angeles. The board of public of public works informed Mr. Martsolf that this method of procedure would without doubt meet with the approval of those who can grant the permission.

Miss Heiliger Entertains Sixteen

Miss Ida Heiliger, 123 North Kenilworth avenue, entertained 16 guests with a charmingly appointed luncheon and an enjoyable card party, Saturday afternoon. The color scheme used exclusively in household and table decorations was rose pink and foliage green. Roses were used attractively in all the decorating. Those present were Mesdames Mary Hickson, Fred Snyder, Godfrey Edwards, James Cormack, Will Broxholme, Alice Winters, Alice Tinkham, Helen King, Wiliam Genn, Laura Eddy, Fred Hannaford, Arthur Hannaford, Grace Sherwood, Palmer Snow, Ernest Wieman and Miss Genevieve Cormack.

The editor of a country daily told a new man to take care of the "Results of Races." The new man was a heavy loser himself, and this how he did it:

The first race was won by Slowcoach.

The second race was won by Spendthrift.

Sam Fiubdub is on trial for non-support.

Pinhead won the last race.

The next day the new man had another assignment, but he claimed he had followed the editor's instructions.

OLD FASHIONED PARTY STAGED AT BROADWAY

Pupils Give Entertainment Under Direction of Principal

At the Broadway school Friday night a real, old-fashioned May day entertainment was staged in the pretty auditorium of the school which has been so greatly improved by the handsome stage curtain provided by the Fathers' Auxiliary of the P.-T. A. It was given by pupils under direction of the principal, Mrs. Mary Ogden Ryan, and her fine corps of teacher assistants, and was a very pretty pageant, with musical embellishments, from start to finish, the spectacular effect being enhanced by the stage lighting effects provided by the high school which generously loaned the machine and an operator for the evening.

Evelyn Peebles and Ovieta Markley were the efficient and pretty pages who announced the program numbers and who did much of the reciting in connection with the beautiful floral cantata with which the entertainment closed.

Following were the numbers of the first part of the program:

School orchestra selection.
Folk games by first grade pupils.
Folk games by A-1 pupils.
Whistling solo by Doris Forbes.
Song, "Sweet Pea Ladies" by second grade pupils charmingly costumed in flower guise and sweet pea colors.
Violin solo by Glee Gates.
Maypole dance by second and third girls.
Piano solo, Freeda Dassoff.
Violin solo, Billy Duncan.
Parasol drill by third grade girls.
School orchestra.

Flowerland Cantata

This charming musical event in which the cast numbered 150 or more children all in flower costumes, was supposed to be a welcome to and entertainment for a beautiful May Queen, the cantata numbers including:

Welcome song; entrance of heralds to announce poppies and attendance; poppy song in which other attendants on the queen joined; entrance of the queen; song of joy; song of the yellow jasmine; song of the leaves; song of the trumpet flowers; song of California; song of the strawberry, song of the violets, lullaby sung by "the breezes;" goodnight song by all flowers.

The costuming though of simple materials, some of it paper, represented much labor, and the letter perfect work of the children, the spontaniety with which they entered into their parts, was a triumph of rehearsing on the part of the patient teachers.

The auditorium was packed and every number received great and sincere applause from appreciative parents.

O. J. ROOT HEADS C. OF C. BOARD OF DIRECTORS

J. Hartley Taylor, as 1st V.-P., to Serve During Mr. Root's Absence

O. J. Root, who has officiated as president of the chamber of commerce since that body was organized here, was unanimously re-elected Friday night as the president of the board of directors, despite his objection that he will be away during the first important months of the work here. The directors, in appointing J. Hartley Taylor as first vice president, felt that they were placing a man of splendid capabilities in a position to carry on the work during Mr. Root's absence, so there was no weight placed upon his arguments against accepting the position.

The officers elected are: O. J. Root, president; J. Hartley Taylor, first vice president; Godfrey Edwards, second vice president; H. H. Maxon, third vice president; Fred Biles, treasurer.

During the meeting, following the appointment of Donnell Montgomery as paid secretary, H. B. Piers, who has been in charge of the organization work here for the past three weeks, spoke on the cooperation that must exist between the chamber of commerce and the secretary.

"The secretary should not be left to do it all, and every member must keep his shoulder to the wheel or the mill will stop running," he said.

Mr. Pier also pointed out the importance of holding a weekly meeting of the board of directors. The next meeting will be held on Friday, June 1.

BIG CROWD ENJOYS COMMUNITY SONG RALLY

EAGLE ROCK, May 28.—About five hundred persons attended the community song rally at the Women's Clubhouse, which closed Music Week in Eagle Rock, on Friday night. Everyone after singing the old popular songs, "Old Black Joe," "Old Folks at Home," and the others, and after listening to the program presented by local talent of much promise, signified a desire to have the enjoyable entertainment repeated frequently. Arthur Farwell, founder of the Community song movement in this country, led the community singing and was well satisfied with the response accorded him by the audience. Every number was well received, but the "Souvenir" selection, played by Mr. Drengberg, on the violin, and Margaret Stuckwish, at the piano, was especially beautiful and loudly applauded.

The Central school orchestra played, and the Girls' Glee Club sang. Mrs. Valdimar Bailey accompanied throughout the evening.

During the community singing an old California Spanish song of hills and canyons "Pena Hueca," was introduced to those present, and they were delighted with the melody and the words.

FOR A GREATER HARBOR

The harbor at San Pedro, embraced within the limits of Los Angeles, is by no means a local concern only. It touches intimately the business interests, and has to do with the future of all of southern California. These facts lift it into more than state importance. It becomes a factor in national trade activity and in international traffic. Therefore there is widespread satisfaction in observing that the proposed issue of bonds, designed to permit the harbor to keep pace with the demands upon it, is receiving enthusiastic support from the voters of Los Angeles. The largest civic bodies there have declared in favor of the bonds, and are working for them. Women have enlisted in the service of promotion, representatives of their club visiting the port in large number so as to have a clear idea as to the needs and the plans. Invariably there have shown a keen appreciation, and have pledged their aid.

Only within recent years have the people of Los Angeles realized the full meaning of the harbor. It was started against keen opposition. Its early career was marked by the sneers of the unbelieving. Even when it had been established, and was functioning in a way, there was reluctance to make complete use of it. It looked well on a map. It was handy as a possible club to hold over the railroads. That was about all. But from the first there were far-seeing men who knew the value of the harbor. They pinned their faith to the theory that San Pedro was to become a leading port. Now their dream is being realized, and no longer are there doubters or unbelievers.

Southern California is destined to have at San Pedro one of the important harbors of the world. Business is demanding space there. Ships of many nations are seeking berths. Vast shipping companies center there. Through San Pedro pours a steady output of oil; into it is received more lumber than enters any other American harbor. The people of Los Angeles understand this now. Their capital is ready for investment there, and when bonds are asked, to make the facilities ample, their support is ready and eager.

MYSTERY OF HATRED

In the trial at Fresno of men accused of sabotage, the testimony is astounding. A witness, once a member of the organization represented by the prisoners, gives it. He tells how phosphorous bombs were so constructed as to set fire to anything with which they came in contact. One plan was to cause acid to corrode telephone guy wires so that the poles would fall down. Matches were smuggled into the pockets of workmen engaged in labor among inflammable materials, the hope being that, accidently dropped, these would result in restroying the property. One bit of meanness was the sowing of Johnson grass seed on fertile farms. Probably the men who performed this sinister labor would have scorned a day's honest toil.

The passion of hatred may be understood, but these forms of its expression constitute a mystery. In what manner the plotters thought thus to better their condition, or advance their cause, is beyond solution through any sane process of thought. If the perpetrators of outrage believed that the hand of every man was against them, their acts demonstrated the reason this should be so. They could not be regarded as normal human beings. That they chose not to work might be explained on the score of laziness, but their resentment at the spectacle of other men at work, baffles the intelligence of the observer. If the basic idea is that prosperity should be shared alike by the slothful and the diligent, there is no wisdom in effacing the prosperity, and leaving nothing to be shared.

The rattlesnake is the moral superior of the person practicing sabotage. The rattler gives warning and puts up a fair fight.

FIRE AND FOLLY

The town of Mexicali below the border has had such an experience with fire as might have been expected. It is not reasonable to suppose that massing tinder in a dry region, in the absence of water, available for emergencies, could be a safe operation. Most of the structures were flimsy. Many of them were peopled by folk who drank much bad liquor, and doubtless smoked with the careless avidity of enthusiasts. There were some, it is to be feared, sadly addicted to the use of opium, the practice not promotive of caution. There was more night life than day life. Existence was on a frivolous plane. No wonder that Mexicali had its visitation, since the disaster had been invited.

The disregard of common safeguards prevails to some extent in places better built, and less permeated by the atmosphere of jazz. It is particularly manifest in relation to the wooded areas of the canyons and mountains. If tourists and hikers could be induced to be careful, probably there would not be one fire where now there are ten. Apparently they cannot be induced. The law sets forth certain regulations that are sedulously ignored. Here and there an offender is caught and penalized, but ordinarily the flames that sweep the hills may not be traced to their origin. Forest authorities are contemplating more stringent measures. It may be that smoking will be forbidden in the reserves, or at a particularly dangerous season, the public be barred.

Fire and folly appear to go together. Their comradeship is direful, but there seems to be something in human nature that favors continuance of the menacing union.

Some policemen are tender-hearted. Occasionally one gives a ragged tramp a rap.

PROTECTING THE CRIMINAL

The police of Los Angeles had reason to suspect a man of participation in an act of highway robbery. It was a bold and violent crime, marked by the shooting of the victim. It was supposed to be the climax of a series perpetrated by the same gang.

If anybody wants to know why the man was not arrested immediately, the answer is that his lawyer would not permit it. According to the story, the lawyer had concealed his client, and refused to tell where, unless first assured that certain rules of treatment as laid down by himself, should be observed towards the prisoner. It would seem that such an attitude might be construed as contempt for organized law in general. Also that the bar association would be quite justifiable in inquiring into it. If a lawyer may be upheld in acting as an intermediary between a criminal and the police, but favoring the former, it would be interesting to have such a singular truth officially confirmed. Thereupon the public might revise its opinion concerning the profession.

To the mind of the observing layman, a man who shields a criminal becomes particeps criminis. He takes his position at the moral level of his principal. He becomes the agent of crime, and in no sense the advocate or instrumentality of justice. If this view is incorrect, doubtless the observing layman, having an open mind, is ready to be set right. At present, his opinion, based upon the information at hand, is such that he probably would not hesitate to say that the lawyer ought to be arrested as an accessory, and clapped promptly into a cell.

BEAUTY BANALITIES

By ESTELLE LAWTON LINDSEY

"A share of beauty is every woman's right.

"Not to crave beauty is unnatural. Not to acquire it is stupid.

Estelle Lawton Lindsey

"Ugliness is a sin because it is unnecessary."

How many women who read those statements believe them? How many thought of them at all?

Of course we all want beauty, theoretically. But as a matter of fact the world is full of people who can not see beauty just as it is full of those who are tone deaf. If this were not true, how account for the hideous interiors that everywhere shock the aesthetic sense of cultivated people, how reconcile sanity with the shocking bad costumes that everywhere confront the eye?

That is by the way. The points in the foregoing quotations which I mean to stress are these:

"Not to acquire it" (that is beauty) "is stupid" and "ugliness is a sin because it is unnecessary."

Suffering shadows of truth. Most of us can modify ugliness, but I defy the most enthusiastic beauty culturist to prove that any woman can acquire beauty. Ugliness may be unnecessary, as poverty is unnecessary, theoretically, but it is at this stage of human development impossible for every woman, or even the majority of women, to acquire beauty.

Beauty doctors can remove blemishes, correct deformities, but no beauty doctor can change the texture of the skin, the shape and color of the teeth, the bony structure of the skeleton, the proportions of the face or body or the expression of the face, which is the register of the sum total of our spiritual activities.

I've just returned from a session with one of the most wonderful facial surgeons in his country. He has done marvels for beauty and in his office I examined numerous photographs showing his patients "before and after taking." His specialty is reforming noses and his work would make a sculptor envious. However, this was patent to any observer, even when he placed a beautiful nose on a person who had suffered from a hideous one, it was evident that the identity of the face, the basic impression that it made on the beholder, was unchanged.

Wattles he can destroy; moles eradicate; wrinkles disappear beneath his knife and bagged eye lids become delicate and lovely; even mouths can be modified, but he can not make straight, oily hair attractive nor fill out flat chests. Ugly feet remain ugly even when he calls in an orthopaedic surgeon to modify their lines, dish faces remain dished. In short, nature placed on the individual numerous hall marks that are so well identified with him as to defy removal or even material modification.

After all, isn't it a bit cruel to overemphasize to women the craving for beauty? It may loosen their hold on their change, to be sure, but the inevitable failure of too many beauty seekers to acquire what they seek is bound to eventuate in heart ache. After all, beauty is of short duration as compared with life and it has probably ruined more lives than it has blessed.

By all means, girls, let's make the best of our points, but let's recognize that some of us were cut for practical work and not designed as national ornaments.

The family beauty is often the most expensive, erratic and unsatisfactory member of a household menage.

THE LISTENING POST

By James W. Foley

JAMES W. FOLEY

Not who you are.
What you are.
Not who your parents were.
But who and what you are.

Not what social station you occupy.

But of what use are you in the world.

* * *

Education is to make useful human beings.

A useful human being is one who cheerfully performs a wholesome service to the greater happiness and comfort of the world.

The greatest human being is the one who by teaching or labor or exhortation or discovery has made most human beings happier.

* * *

So you are a human being.

It is not so important how you came to be a human being.

It is not so important whether you were once a monkey or a Neanderthal man.

But it is mighty important today what you are doing with your humanity.

* * *

Much of the time of learned men, or men who claim to be highly cultured and well informed, is devoted to non-essentials.

If a stranger comes to your door hungry it is not of the first importance by what road he came.

Or whether he walked up the steps or hopped up.

Whether he came by land or sea.

The important thing is that he have something to eat.

* * *

That is the first and greatest consideration.

For if he should starve, then it would make no difference how or when he came.

And it is so with many matters of dogma and creed and difference of opinion.

Many opinions are set forth and defended merely to vindicate one's own obstinacy of opinion or tenacity of belief.

* * *

Christ disposed at one time very happily of one of the persons who are always asking questions designed to muddle up rather than to clarify.

When he was asked whether men should pay tribute to Caesar.

And you remember his reply.

That the things of God should be rendered to Him and the things of Caesar rendered to Caesar.

* * *

The essential things for useful and happy living in this world are health and nourishment and hygiene and exercise and learning and skill and kindliness and self-control and brotherliness.

These are essentials.

It is not so important how they are gained.

But it is important that they be gained.

* * *

So being a human being in this world, it is important that you make the best use of your humanity.

Or the developed intelligence of the ages.

For the betterment of the human race.

By your labor.

By your good nature.

By your friendliness.

By your cleanliness of mind and body.

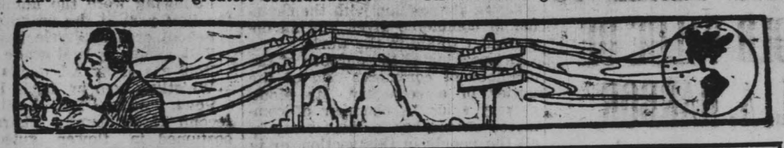
* * *

If a man fall, it is important that he be lifted up.

If he be in ill health, it is important that he be made well.

Whatever lifts him and makes him well is a good thing.

The main thing is that the thing be done.



Songs of the Poets

Old Age—By Edmund Waller

The seas are quiet when the winds give o'er;
So calm are we when passions are no more.
For then we know how vain it was to boast
Of fleeting things, so certain to be lost.
Clouds of affection from our younger eyes
Conceal that emptiness which age decries.

The soul's dark cottage, batter'd and decay'd,
Lets in new light through chinks that Time hath made:
Stronger by weakness, wiser men become
As they draw near to their eternal home.
Leaving the old, both worlds at once they view
That stand upon the threshold of the new.

THE FUNNY MAN

By DR. FRANK CRANE

THE man with the purest and most Christian purpose, by nature, is the Funny Man. He has but one desire—to make one feel good. Surely a most laudable aim. He is the friend of man.

Every one has some sort of design upon me. The Tailor wants to put his wares on my form, the Hatter wants to get one of his lids upon my head, and the Shoemaker to get his leather on my feet, the Barber wants to lather me and scrape me, the Dentist wants to put his buzzer in my mouth, the Surgeon longs to get me unconscious and come at me with his knives, the Bootblack wants to polish two of my extremities and the Manicurist the other two.

Hotel-Keepers want to make me eat and Bar-Keepers to make me drink, the Hack Driver wants to drive me about and the Usher wants me to sit down, my Wife makes me go to bed and my Baby makes me get up, the Ball-Player wants me to yell and the Lecturer wants me to keep still.

The School-Teacher wants me to study, and the Playmate wants me to "come out among the barley," the Railway Man wants to rush me from city to city, the Steamship Man wants to take me across the water, and the Elevator Boy wants me to go up and down and not to forget him on Christmas, the Preacher wants to make me repent and take a pew, and my unregenerate Neighbor wants me to fracture the Sabbath Day with him with a golf stick, Parents want to make me good, and the Ragamuffins in the alley want to make me bad, the Doctor wants to dose me, the Christian Scientist wants to read a book to me, Flies want to tickle my nose, Fleas want to bite me, Cats want to rub up against my leg, Bees want to sting me, Bears want to eat me, Ticks want to bore into my skin, Jailers want to lock me up, Soldiers want to kill me, and Undertakers want to bury me.

So I run the gantlet. Every one takes a whack at me. Therefore, here's my hand to the Funny Man, who has but one desire—to make me laugh.

You may throw bricks at the Funny Man if you like. You may say that he is a conceited fellow, that he likes to show off, that he lacks seriousness, that he loves to make reputable people ridiculous, and important matters absurd.

Granted. He may be a vain fellow and sometimes tiresome. There are occasions when nothing will satisfy us but a good spell of weeping, and it irritates us to have some one crack a joke and spoil our dismal pleasure.

Still, for all that the Funny Man is an amiable fellow, and I find it impossible to hate any one who wants to get nothing from me but a laugh. For, after all, laughter is as cheap as tears. I have tried them both. And those who take their pay in smiles leave me not half so poor as those who find their reward in my distress.

And it is a great mistake to suppose that it takes no brains to be funny. Quite the contrary. The most commonplace writer can drool along for 500 pages of tragedy or sordid muck-raking or dreary bitterness. But it is a rare genius indeed that can be funny for a dozen pages.

Usually a joke runs anywhere from three to twenty lines, whereas a sermon or denunciation often goes on forever.

COMMENT ON DAY'S NEWS

By HENRY JAMES

HENRY JAMES

Baseball as a profession might not stir the ambitions of a youth who was nurturing a plan to reform the world. The fame it wins is fleeting, and the chances are precarious. That is to say, one must make good to get into the major leagues, and keep good to stay there. If he were to falter it would be back to the bushes for him. Nevertheless baseball is far from being an ignoble calling.

The human race is entitled to a proportion of playing hours. Diversion is as essential as work. Baseball is healthful even as a spectacle. The players themselves are athletes, and usually keep in good physical condition for many years.

Ball players who develop their initial skill at school, and are asked to enter the game professionally, do not as a rule take it up with a view to making it a life calling. Many players have trades or other professions. Doctors and lawyers have worn the uniform while studying, or in order to get capital to carry them along when they first open their offices.

The pay of a ball player is high; in case of the most expert, very high. So many of his expenses are borne by the club that he has unusual opportunity to save if by nature thrifty. By the time he is ready to retire from the diamond, he ought still to be in the prime of his life, and with enough capital to enter commercial business. Meanwhile his travels have made him acquainted with many men, and conditions in many cities.

The husky athletes frisking over the diamond are not wasting the energies. They afford the public enjoyment, and if reasonably shrewd, they are looking out for a future when their names shall have vanished from the box score.

Always there seem to be more desperadoes along any border dividing two countries than could be found in either of the countries. It is convenient to be where escape from one jurisdiction into another is easy. Of course there are times when the authorities, standing close to each side of the line, disturb the general law of immunity.

Probably in all border history there never has come to light a more brutalized and degraded set of gangsters than those engaged ostensibly in smuggling aliens across from Mexico, but really taking them to some remote spot where they are robbed and murdered.

Mexico and the United States both being pledged to the maintenance of good order, conditions at the border seem to afford a fine chance for co-operation.

An advertisement says "there is no place for the old looking man or woman these days." There follows, of course, the information that the authors of the advertisement are ready to carve immortal youth upon any withered countenance.

Meanwhile, if a man or woman is old, there is no disgrace in looking old. and if either thinks to fool the world by buying a new face, he or she might as well save the money.

Rumor that the Chinese authorities are not sincere in their attitude towards the world in relation to banditry, seems to be gaining strength.

There is a well grounded faith in the honesty of the Chinese. Their criminal classes are recognized as extremely fierce and conscienceless, but this fact never has been cited as impunging the integrity of the Chinese as a whole.

Evidently some form of intervention is necessary. If the government is not corrupt, as charged, then it must be weak, and in need of assistance.

WATCHING THE PARADE

By JOHN PILGRIM

Maybe I'm a little foolish about it, but I certainly do like my food. Eating isn't the biggest thing in life, but it is one of the big things. Trainers say that their human charges do not flourish in frying-pan latitudes. Soggy bread, according to William Muldoon, has done more harm than all the liquor that was ever distilled. If I had my way about it I'd pull down most of the statues of alleged statesmen that mar our parks and put up monuments to cooks. One of the finest bits of literature ever printed by our government is its cook-book. More people have heard of French cooking than ever grew interested in Napoleon.

Yet the least crowded profession in the United States is that which deals with the art and science of cooking.

And it is the profession which—for the run of the human minds—pays the best.

That is a sordid argument, perhaps. But it is the argument that has most weight in an imperfect world. Most young doctors adopt the profession of medicine not so much because their hearts bleed for humanity as because of the rewards they believe it offers. Likewise those who crowd other professions.

One reason, perhaps, why we have so few good cooks in the United States is because of our national habit of hurry. We refuse to wait while a meal is properly cooked and served. The blight of the steam table hangs over us. We gallop through an array of overcooked and double-warmed dishes and then stand around for half an hour until it is time to get back to the grind. Lots of us do not know there is such a thing as good cooking. We crust our fried steak with salt and swamp our stomachs with stale pie and then wonder why the world goes wrong.

Yet no people in the world pay as much for food as the Americans. We have more and better materials for good cookery than any other people. A really good cook is paid a higher wage here than anywhere else in the world. If he is in business for himself he gets rich.

THE RIGHT WORD

COLD ANALYSIS

The following letter has been received from J. C. Kennedy of Lewiston, Idaho:

"I am wondering if we might have a campaign on the use of certain constructions involving the infinitive. We find among recognized writers and speakers such expressions as the following: Have you any chickens large enough to eat? Is your colt old enough to drive? Is your cow ready to milk?

"Have such expressions been in use so long, even though they are not used in accordance with our rules of grammar, that they have become a fixed part of our language?

"We have a passive form of the infinitive; why not use it in such cases? In the expression, 'Are your chickens old enough to eat?' who can tell what is meant?

"Kindly let us have your opinion on this inquiry."

Grammatical rules are the obedient servants of good usage. A grammatical rule will even die if good usage so wills—although some of them die hard. To eat and to be eaten, through usage, have become more or less interchangeable, the former being rather more prevalent than the latter; as, Have you any houses to let? I want a horse to ride; Have you had enough to eat? Therefore, the sentences under dispute are correct.

EASTERN POINT OF VIEW

DEEMED AN ABSURDITY

[Springfield Republican]

The court's conclusion that the sale of liquors aboard American ships is lawful on the high seas seems to be based on a rather nice technicality. The eighteenth amendment and the Volstead act have been literally interpreted in order to justify that ruling. It is evidently held that, in the absence of any specific reference in the law to the liquor traffic aboard American ships on the high seas, the territory of the United States must be regarded as the land surface and the so-called territorial waters within a narrow zone. If this interpretation uncovers a fault in the Volstead act, it can be cured probably by an act of congress providing that the act shall apply to American ships on the high seas. Such an act certainly would not be in violation of the eighteenth amendment, for it is unquestionable that an American ship flying the American flag is subject to American law of some sort on the ocean where no one national jurisdiction prevails. It is simply a question of making a specific statutory provision that on the high seas this particular law shall apply to American vessels.

The general principle of international law is that the deck of a ship acquires, broadly speaking, the national status of the flag at the masthead. A British ship on the high seas does not lose its British character, nor does an American ship lose its American character. If the constitution and the federal law do not follow the flag in this particular case we face a moral, if not a legal, absurdity.

NEWS AND VIEWS OF BURBANK AND ITS ENVIRONS

BURBANK HONORS NATION'S HEROES WITH SOLEMN CEREMONY IN SONGS AND ADDRESSES

Pays Tribute of Spirit of Lexington, Gettysburg, San Juan and Argonne in Community Service at Edison School Building

Cherishing the traditions and customs which have made the United States so distinctly different from every other country, Burbank held the second Memoral Day services of this year at the Edison building Sunday evening. The first service was observed at all the schools, this being for the entire community given under the auspices of the Burbank Ministerial association.

All patriotic and civic bodies were present. The G. A. R., the W. R. C., the Sons of Veterans, Spanish-American War Veterans, the American Legion, Company I, and members of all the organizations of Burbank attended. Rev. Leslie G. Parker, pastor of the Christian church presided. Rev. Thomas Stevenson and Rev. Thos. Allen shared in the evening's program. Rev. E. A. Main, pastor of the Baptist church, gave the address of the evening.

The observance of the first program of Sunday night and the one to come Wednesday morning when the American Legion will dedicate the burial ground has followed out the general plan of the general memorial day committee, representing all patriotic organizations. The committee announces:

"When we assemble to pay our tribute of loving affection to those of our comrades who have stacked their arms and answered the call of the Great Commander of us all, ever bearing in mind their valor, their courage and their self sacrificing spirit, we desire to perform the sacred duty in a way that shall best promote the interests of the great cause and for which they gave the full measure of sacrifice.

"We most earnestly and cordially invite all who appreciate the blessings that have come to them through the great effort of the departed comrades to join us in this solemn and most interesting ceremony; you are requested to lay aside business and forego the amusements and pleasures which so many times have taken place of these more serious and interesting exercises.

"The true purpose and intent of Memorial Day seems to be largely misconstrued and the day of memories has been thoughtlessly devoted to picnics and to all sorts of frivolous, unpatriotic diversions, thus impairing its inspiring influences for lofty, enduring patriotism and high ideals.

"Business men, why not close up your factories, stores and offices on Memorial Day? Give one day out of 365. Surely this is not much to give to the memory of the nation's honored dead.

"Especially would we invite the young people to join us, that in them may be inspired a more lofty conception of what great sacrifice in blood and treasure the war of the past meant and what it has done for the nation, and that there may be developed in them the same patriotic pride in our country and the same love for the dear old flag, that was the dominant motive in the hearts of those who went forth to give their lives that those that were to come after them might enjoy the great blessing of a united country.

"Especial attention is called to the flying of the stars and stripes by all patriotic and liberty-loving citizens. Do not allow the naked flag poles bear witness to your lack of interest in the observance of Memorial Day."

CORYELLS RECEIVE VISIT FROM SON AND FAMILY

Lieutenant Clyde Coryell Stops on Way to North

Lieutenant Clyde Coryell, U. S. N., and Mrs. Coryell and son, Thomas, left today for San Francisco after a short visit with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Coryell, 505 North Orange Grove avenue.

Lieutenant Coryell has been head engineer at North Island, San Diego, but was transferred to Mare Island, San Francisco. He is motoring with his family from San Diego to San Francisco, the west coast base for the Pacific fleet. They stopped a few days at the Coryell home.

Mr. and Mrs. Morris Spazier are spending a few days at Santa Barbara, where they drove in their new Cole limousine. They will return after Memorial day.

Hard Working Man Becomes Intoxicated

"Your honor I wish you'd make the fine as light as you can because I'm a laboring man," said Gerald Hastings of Ontario when he stood before Judge Crawford this morning, pleading guilty to being intoxicated.

"Of course if the doctor says I was intoxicated, I must have been but I'd only had two drinks of whiskey."

However, when called upon to state just exactly how he did feel, he had such a muddled remembrance of it all that he decided "intoxicated" was just about the right name for it.

As he was not driving a machine—just sitting in it trying to make it go without having turned on the switch—the judge fined him $25.

Not so fortunate was Carl Strong, for he had managed to have the switch on and the gas going while he was in his car in an intoxicated condition. He hardly thought he was intoxicated for he had not had anything to drink since leaving Santa Monica where he said he had quaffed twice from the burning cup.

"Thirty days in the county jail or $150," said Judge Crawford.

GIRL SCOUT ACTIVITIES

By DOROTHY SALSBURY, Scribe

The Girl Scouts business was conducted around the camp fire after a weinie bake held at Scout Lillian Lewis' home. The "eats" were provided by Mountain Laurel patron and were different from typical weinie bakes, the weinies and saur graut having been heated over the gas range and with French bread served around the camp fire.

Later on, wafers and lemonade were served and marshmellows were toasted. The main topic discussed was the summer camp near Santa Monica. Dr. Zeiss has offered to find transportation for scouts and equipage. All Scouts who wish to go will have to notify Captain Diss by June 1.

After the business meeting the scouts marched down to the Thomas A. Edison school, where regular exercises were held. Later, scout songs were practiced. Eight scouts were chosen to repeat the scout motto, slogan, promise and laws before the Parent-Teacher association meeting at the high school Thursday.

All the mothers are invited to attend the Mothers and Daughters banquet Monday.

A new Girl Scout troop is to be organized. It will take in eight girls from the fourth grade and eight from the fifth. Mrs. Benson will act as captain. It will be troop 3.

MOTHERS AND DAUGHTERS TO DINE TONIGHT

Will Have Banquet at the Methodist Church

Great enthusiasm is being shown by the young girls and the mothers of Burbank in the big community dinner this evening at the Methodist church. The Mothers and Daughters banquet, given for the first time in Burbank, promises to be a big success.

Every year that the fathers and sons have diner groups of women have spoken of having such an affair for mothers and daughters, but never could they get the time the place and the folks together. This year the Girl Scouts and the Campfire Girls helped to boost and the meeting is going over 100 per cent in every respect.

The dinner and the program and the decorations will be of the best. Tickets have been selling fast ever since the date was announced. Unless you have reserved your seat you can hardly expect much to eat, but every woman and girl in town is invited to attend.

"It is the most amazingly marvelous photo drama of any being shown. It deals with whales, and thrills, adventures and romance incident to the pursuit and capture of the monsters of the deep. It stands in a class alone as an unquestionably fine thing.

"Some one said the picture is the result on the part of some wealthy citizens of New Bedford to perpetuate the memory of the old whaling days, of which New Bedford was the center.

"The story is written by a New England man. It tells of the love of a Quaker maiden and a young man of the town who is not of the Quaker faith. The girl's father is a haughty God-fearing whaleman who has made her promise that she will marry no one but a man who has been a whaleman and a Quaker.

"For the girl's sake her lover determines to ship on a whaling vessel. He wins not only the girl but everybody concerned by harpooning and capturing a 90-ton whale. It is a whole of a story from start to finish. It is wonderfully education. I wish every girl and boy in Burbank could see it."

NURSERY SCHOOLS

By H. ADDINGTON BRUCE

Author of "The Riddle of Personality," "Self-Development," Etc.

(Copyright, 1923, by The Associated Newspapers)

To the kindergarten has now succeeded the nursery school, for children two to four or five years of age. It is an innovation that is not altogether pleasing to many people, just as many disapproved of the kindergarten in its beginnings.

Yet, if only in the light of certain findings of modern psychology, there is ample reason for the establishing of nursery schools.

The so-called pre-school age, psychological research has made evident, is not the period of mental inertia it is commonly supposed to be. On the contrary, the mind is then peculiarly active, casting about in all directions, and most receptive of impressions received from any source.

More than this, in these years of early childhood there is a vigorous response to whatever impressions are received, with the result that character trends and mental habits of lasting significance are developed and acquired. Obviously it is important to insure so far as possible that the impressions received will make for desirable trends and habits.

Not all parents appreciate this. And among those who do appreciate it many are handicapped by circumstances which make it difficult for them to safeguard their children against receiving hurtful impressions. Thus a real and vitally important need exists, side by side with the equally important need of safeguarding the physical health of children.

To meet both these needs is the prime purpose of nursery schools. As explained in an address by Sir Auckland Geddes, replying to objectors against the nursery school idea:

"I notice the ridiculers are either childless or else are the sort of people who maintain at considerable expense in their own homes the very sort of nursery school which we are setting up for the use of all.

"It is easy to make merry and draw pictures of tiny tots with horn-rimmed spectacles toiling with great tomes, but the facts are otherwise.

"The purpose of the nursery school is not even to teach the three R's, but by sleep, food and play to provide the opportunity for little children to lay foundations of health, habit and responsive personality, which is just what every nursery in the world is supposed to be doing."

As yet there are few nursery schools in operation, and these chiefly in England and the United States. It is safe to predict that there will constantly be additions to their numbers as public appreciation of thier worth krows.

It is safe to predict, too, that with any general establishing of nursery school systems many a serious social problem will gradually lose its urgency. To lack of nursery schools in the past must be attributed in no small part the disturbed, distressed condition of society today.

BURBANK BUILDING PERMITS FOR PAST THREE DAYS IN MAY OUTRANK THE ENTIRE MONTH OF MAY, 1922

When the Burbank building inspector, Elmer Dale, closed his office last Saturday morning, for the last Saturday in this month, his books showed a building permit record of $249,965. These figures loom even larger when compared with May of 1922, for that month was credited with $62,325, a total of less than half of May, 1923.

The permits for the last three days scored even more than the entire month last year, for they amounted to $83,650. Several large permits were issued this week. One was to C. B. Fitzsimmons for a $10,000 dwelling on West Tenth street. E. L. White was given permits for five small houses to be built on Pass avenue. They were valued at $2000, $3000, $3000, $2500 and $3500.

One permit was issued to Dr. E. H. Thompson for $40,000, for a brick and concrete hospital to be erected at 458 North Olive avenue. Dr. Thompson plans to put in many innovations planned while studying abroad this past winter, it is said.

The permits for the last three days are: S. P. railway additions, $375; E. Olson, garage, $175; Edward Mitske, 434 Santa Anita, dwelling, $1600; E. H. Thompson, hospital, North Olive avenue, $40.000; P. O. Hubbard, 8-room dwelling, 554 North Magnolia, $5000; L. Y. Carter, Cedar avenue, $2200; C. A. Kuhl, garage, 221 North Magnolia avenue, $175 E. L. White, Pass avenue, $14,000; Floyd Shirley, $300; Cora Schanbel, Scott road, two dwellings, $1000; C. B. Fitzsimmons, $10,000; Wm. Coryell, dwelling, 634 North Olive, $3000; Ramon Telles, Santa Anita, dwelling, $1000; Earl Eglington, 738 North Tujunga, $500; J. H. Trumb, 710 Cedar avenue, $175; Ethel Campbell, dwelling, $1500; total, $83,650.

If a drawer runs unevenly and causes trouble in opening and shutting, it is not always necessary to have recourse to the carpenter, for frequently the very simple method of rubbing a little coap on the inner edges of the drawers will overcome this difficulty.

Always buy soap both for household and toilet purposes, in large quantities if you possibly can, and store it away until required. This allows it to harden, and you will find that it will last almost as long again. Store candles in the same way, as they last much longer than if used when new.

MRS. TOLL TO BE HONORED BY HER CLUB FRIENDS

Reception, Program and Party Announced for Tuesday Afternoon

A reception, program and party is to be given Tuesday afternoon, beginning at 2:30 o'clock, at the clubhouse at Lexington Drive and Central avenue, in honor of Mrs. Charles H. Toll of Glendale, life member of the club, and who was recently elected president of the Los Angeles District Federation of Women's Clubs. The guests will also include the 100 life members and all new members who have joined the Tuesday Afternoon Club since the afternoon of June 27, 1922.

The reception will be held from 2:30 o'clock until 3. The program of the afternoon will be along the line of "Conservation." Mrs. Campbell will give some of the "high lights" of the recent state convention at Eureka. There will be musical numbers by the Nevin Quartet, solo numbers by Mrs. A. M. Draper and Mrs. John Cole and violin numbers by Miss Hazel Linkogel.

The curators of the ten sections will pour. Mrs. Colin Cable, chairman of hospitality, assisted by Mrs. W. E. Evans, general curator, and the committee chairmen will have charge of refreshments.

COMBINED SCHOOL CONCERT TO BE GIVEN

The first annual concert to be given by pupils of the combined city schools is being organized under direction of Miss Elsa Brennaman, supervisor of music in the city schools, and her assistant, Mrs. Ettarae Kent.

It will have its first presentation June 7 at 8 p. m., in the auditorium of the Broadway school, and will be repeated there the following night, that all parents and children who desire to hear it may have opportunity. The program will be given by the combined orchestras of the schools, and by the Glee clubs of the two intermediate schools. A feature of the evening will be the numbers by the junior orchestra organized only three months ago.

A short cantata will be given by the Teachers' Choral club. The aim of the concert will be to emphasize ensemble work.

As the seating capacity of this pleasant auditorium is only 360, those desiring tickets will do well to secure them early through the schools. The prices have been fixed at 25 cents for adults and 15 cents for children. The proceeds will be used to provide instruments and other equipment for the music department of the city schools.

SONG OF GLADNESS

Come, smooth out those wrinkles
And put off that frown,
Coax back the lost twinkles
From eyes blue or brown;
The minutes are flying,
That make up the day,
Don't let them with crying
Pass useless away.

Come, truce to the fretting,
The doubts and the fears,
It's time for forgetting
The troubles and tears.
The hours are flying
That make up the day,
Don't let them with sighing
Pass idly away.

Come, cease the regretting,
An end to thy woes,
Go forth and try getting
The joy as it goes.
The dawn gave us greeting,
The day's at its noon,
The hours are fleeting
And pass all too soon.

So let us be whiling
The hours away
With tasks done with smiling,
Not long is the day.
Let's smooth out the wrinkles,
Let's banish the sighs.
And coax back the twinkles
To brighten our eyes.
